Allotment Plan Proposed For Early Use on Wheat

Additional preliminary work which included further appointments and some informal advance hearings with representatives of the various commodity groups, marked the progress made this past week in getting the new federal farm act into effect, according to a review of information received direct from Washington made by the Oregon Extension service.

Probably the most significant event to Oregon farmers is the outcome of the preliminary conference of representatives of the nation's wheat industry which was presided over by M. L. Wilson, wheat production administrator. Reports from that meeting are that there is considerable likelihood that the domestic allotment plan as affecting wheat will be put into effect in time for this fall's seeding of winter wheat.

Though the farm act administration has been firm in emphasizing that it is not yet committed to any particular plan, the advocates of the voluntary domestic allotment plan, headed by M. W. Thatcher of the Farmers National Grain corporation, were given prominence in reports of this informal hearing. Thatcher proposed that payments to farmers be made this season on agreement to reduce fall wheat acreage for the 1934 crop, and that a processing tax to finance such payments be effective August 1.

Should this proposal be adopted it would mean that farmers who would agree to reduce acreage to the determined amount would be given advance benefit payments from the special fund provided in the bill in advance of the collection of enough processing tax money to finance the plan that early.

This was part of the advance plan of sponsors of the bill who felt that the stimulus of increased farm purchasing power should precede the collection of the processing tax.

The theory on which the domestic allotment plan is based is that it is necessary to reduce wheat production in this country to a level equal to the domestic demand plus the probable export outlet. Without some machinery to insure general adherence to such a reduction plan it cannot be put into effect except through the long and painful process of survival of the fittest.

The new farm act provides machinery whereby the amount of necessary reduction will be determined and then each state, county and finally each wheat grower will be "allotted" a share in the necessary production based on past average output.

A farmer then will have the opportunity to agree to cut his acreage down to the proposed amount and in return will be paid enough excess over the market price for his remaining harvest to boost his return per bushel to the pre-war exchange value of wheat. A farmer who refused to sign such an agreement would continue to receive only the general market price which, as now, could be subject to the influence of world conditions. Thus the plan is to bring about acreage reduction by making it profitable for farmers generally to enter such voluntary agreements, and unprofitable for the "individualist" to remain outside.

Against Our Own Help

"It is thy destruction, O Israel, that thou art against Me, against thy help."

What sheer witlessness it would have been if, during the World War, the British and French and American and other allied armies had turned their guns upon each other and had gone to fighting among themselves. Germany would very soon have won such a war as that.

And yet, here in the world today, is ranged on our side Omnipotence, with all the hosts of heaven and righteousness ready to fight for us AGAINST the forces of sin and unrighteousness; YET, how often we are so foolish as to stand AGAINST our heavenly allies, and do all we can, apparently, to thwart God's plans for our victory over the untoward things of this life.

Surely this will be our destruction, as it was the destruction of Israel, if it continues. And what else could we expect. How quickly and utterly we ought to turn from such folly. And how quickly we ought, all of us who have not already done so, to enter in to that wonderful alliance with Christ in Christian living, which has been so wonderfully provided for us. How many fine men and women and young folks of today are living either tragically the wrong life, or only at half their possibilities, because they are leaving Christ out of their lives.

Do you have a Church home? If not, come and worship with us. We invite you to come and test the welcome of this friendly Church.

For the coming Lord's Day, the sermon topics will be: For the morning service, "The Conditions of Hope." For the evening service, "Doing What Jesus Says."

States Dual Purpose Of Conservation Work

That the president's emergency conservation work is a program of man building as well as forest building, is the concept of foresters and army officers in handling the forest camps. This policy is based on the president's expressed views, as set forth in his remarks to the congress asking for the adoption of his recovery program, when he said, in part:

"This enterprise is an established part of our national policy. It will conserve our precious natural resources. It will pay dividends to the present and future generations. It will make improvements in national and state domains which have been largely forgotten in the past few years of industrial development."

"More important, however, than the material gains will be the moral and spiritual value of such work. The overwhelming majority of unemployed Americans, who are now walking the streets and receiving private or public relief, would infinitely prefer to work. We can take a vast army of these unemployed into healthful surroundings. We can eliminate to some extent at least the threat that enforced idleness brings to spiritual and moral stability. It is not a panacea for all the unemployment, but it is an essential step in this emergency."

In all plans for the handling of the emergency conservation work in this region, man-rehabilitation and forest conservation have been given equal weight, according to Regional Forester C. J. Buck.

"We are not coddling these boys," said Mr. Buck. "We expect them to deliver a fair day's work, and to contribute to the betterment and security of the forests in which they are working. We want to contribute to their self-respect, and to give them the wholesome outlook on life that woodmanship brings. We want to send them back to their homes better men, mentally and physically; and we hope they will carry throughout their mature years a love of the forest, and an active desire to help protect and perpetuate this great national resource with which they have been working—our American forests."

W. C. T. U. NOTES

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.
Everybody commends the government for its solicitude for the Indians. They are the wards of the government and should be protected against any evil influence. How much better if the Indian than the boys and girls of the white people? The government has ruled that 3.2 beer can not be sold to the Indians on the reservations. But white boys and girls are not protected from this liquor.

Population and the number of automobiles in relation to population considered, the number of automobile accidents in Great Britain is several times that of the United States, and the authorities over there attribute this situation to the fact that intoxicating liquor is readily obtainable anywhere in England and other parts of Great Britain.

Every motorist is warned to avoid the use of intoxicating liquor of any kind when driving. Evidently, prohibition is not so much of a failure as our wet friends would have us believe. No one who will give serious thought to the question will conclude that it will be safer on the highways when intoxicating liquor is more easily procured. The increase in automobile accidents in Canada since "government control" was adopted is amazing. Do you want to increase the hazard of traveling on the highways? If so, vote for repeal of prohibition.

The old damiering attitude of the liquor interests is again becoming manifest. The brewers want the prohibition enforcement officials to put a stop to homebrewing because it is unfair competition to their business and they "pay taxes" on their product. The wets succeeded in reducing the appropriation for prohibition enforcement, but they want the Volstead Act enforced against the homebrewer. However, it is well to remember that the brewers and retailers of beer do not pay the taxes; they simply collect them off the drinkers and turn the money over to the government. In this connection, it is also well to notice that the homebrew which contains more than "one half of one per cent" of alcohol is subject to the revenue features of the law. In the not remote past, the wets made a great roar about the "one half of one per cent" limitation, but when they want to shut off competition they draw the line at "one half of one per cent." That is not surprising for it was the old beer crowd who first wrote that limit into the law years and years before prohibition.

The liquor crowd will soon be trying to tell every officer from the president down to the constable that they want the officers to put a stop to the illicit making of intoxicating liquor so as to protect them. Those who are old enough to remember the old days know how the booze crowd thought they owned the government and that every officer was bound to do their bidding. And they undertook to punish every officer who did not follow their dictation. Do you want a return of such conditions? If so, vote for repeal.

O. S. C. Campus Ready to Welcome Four-H Clubbers

Four-H club boys and girls of Oregon will flock to the Oregon State college campus June 12 to begin the round of instruction, recreation and general education that makes up their annual two weeks summer school. This will be the nineteenth session.

The cost of board and room and tuition for the two weeks has been reduced this year to $12, which is $1 less than last year and $3 less than two years ago. Hundreds of boys and girls will have their expenses paid through scholarships won by them during the past year for outstanding work in their various projects, while many others will be sent as delegates from their clubs and communities, and still others will pay their own expenses with money made in their club work.

As in the past, the clubbers will live in the college dormitories—the boys in the men's building and the girls in Waldo hall. Beds and mattresses will be furnished, but members are expected to bring their own bedding and towels, according to H. C. Seymour, state club leader. Girls will also do well to bring bathing caps, tennis shoes, and gym suits if possible, as well as sewing equipment, including scissors, tape line, thimble, needles and thread. All members who play musical instruments are urged to take them along.

The clubbers will spend their mornings in laboratory and classroom work under the guidance of members of the college faculty. Several new courses will be offered this year in response to requests from club members and leaders, and every effort has been made to construct a well-rounded and practical program of instruction for the boys and girls. The popular afternoon assemblies will be continued this year, as will the evening radio programs and entertainments, and the hours of supervised sports, swimming tanks, tennis courts, lounge rooms, and all campus facilities will be open to the clubbers to make their two weeks at college both enjoyable and profitable.
