Strawberry Researches Bringing Improvements

That strawberry plants will lend themselves to the same general methods of improvement through eliminating virus diseases as has long been successfully used with potatoes is the definite determination of Dr. S. M. Zeller, plant path-ologist at the Oregon Experiment station

Pathologists at the station disovered some years ago that yields water pump, also .32 Remington of strawberries are being seriously in most Oregon fields Heppner, Ore. through the presence of the straw-berry crinkle disease, a virus disorder similar to mosaic that attacks potatoes. Whether any stock free from this disease could be developed appeared doubtful for a while, however.

Dr. Zeller obtained a small start of what appeared to be clean plants, however, and has increased them for the Marshall variety thru many generations. This year the question arose as to whether these were merely resisting the disease because of favorable environment. Certain ones of the plants in the greenhouse were therefore inoculated by "pasturing" aphids on them after they had previously been on infected plants. The results were Strawberry plant improvement work which will lead to certification has already been started in several sections of the state and there is room for more of it so as to make Oregon a center of high grade planting stock as well as high production in the commercial fields, believe horticultural officials at the state college.

This latest work of Dr. Zeller's shows conclusively, they say, that the same methods of selection, maintenance of a personal "seed plot" by growers of planting stock, and careful rogueing out of diseased plants will bring results just as it has with potatoes. Work at the experiment station has also proved that the disease is carried from main plant to runners and from plant to plant by insects, just as with potatoes, but that it is not transmitted by contact.
