invent a National song that everybody can sing. "America" is good, but it's the same tune as "God Save the King" and "Hell Dir in Siegenstrasse." Why not go back to the Revolution of 1776 and revise the tune the Continental soldiers sang, which is "Yankee Doodle?" That's a good, lively tune, but it needs some new words.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.

The people of Oregon will not only vote on the proposition to repeal the 18th amendment, July 21, but will also vote on the proposition to repeal Sections 35 and 36 of Article I of the State Constitution, being the prohibition amendment adopted in 1914 and 1916.

In the argument in the voters' pamphlet, the same old "bunk" is peddled by the wet argument's author. He argues that the revenue from the liquor will reduce taxes. It has not done so in British Columbia since they went back to government control. The public debt has increased amazingly. Even if it did reduce taxes, who will benefit? It will be those who are most able to pay. The rich taxpayers are the ones who are financing this fight on prohibition. They seek to put the burden of government off on the shoulders of the poor laboring class who have always been the largest drinkers of intoxicating liquors. You would think that the author of the argument in the pamphlet believed that the money collected by the brewers and distillers and saloonkeepers was money, you found. Such argument is an insult to anyone who has the capacity to think intelligently upon the question. There is not any sound economic reason for collecting such taxes. Moreover, only a small part of the money taken from the poor fellows who drink will find its way into the public treasury. It is good business sense to give a tax collector 90 or 95 per cent of the money to collect and turn over 5 or 10 per cent to the government?

The author of this wet argument says that the repeal of prohibition will put money into the pockets of producers and wage earners of Oregon. Yes, it will put money into the pockets of a few producers and wage earners, but it will extract a much larger sum from the poor fellows who drink and will give to them something which not only will do them no good, but will positively do them harm. It will reduce their productive powers, and the result will be that Oregon will be very much poorer than it would be if the drinker did not contribute to the pockets of the brewers, distillers, saloonkeepers, and the wage earners whom they employ.

Remember, too, that the money which goes into the pockets of the brewers, distillers and retail dealers will not find its way into the tills of the local merchants, the ice cream dealer, the dairyman, and the fuel dealer to any great extent. Will that help them to pay their taxes? No government can afford to collect revenue by any system which debauches its people. Be not deceived. Wake up! Vote: 301 X No and 315 X No.

JOSHUA.
Lesson for July 2nd.
Joshua 1:1-9.
Golden Text: Joshua 1:9.

The third quarter lessons introduce us to some early leaders of the Old Testament period. The first of these is Joshua. He is not, obviously, one of the supreme figures in the Bible gallery of portraits. Nevertheless he is a great soul who took a leading part in the stirring events of a critical period. He was one of the two older men who were permitted to enter the promised land. He was afraid neither of the giants of Canaan, nor of the fickle-hearted folk in the ranks of the children of God who yearned after the flesh pots of Egypt.

In these days of fear and distrust, people sometimes cry, "Oh for a Moses to lead us through the wilderness!" But what we need most of all is a Joshua to lead us out of the wilderness.

Now note that Joshua always obeyed the divine command. He was never guilty, like Moses, of disobedience. Dr. Matheson calls Joshua a prosaic man, that is, a subordinate who carried out the instructions of his chief. God did the planning, and Joshua, a willing tool, fulfilled the divine decisions. "Arise, go over this Jordan," said the Lord, and Joshua and the people at once crossed the famous river into the fair land of their dreams. "See, I have given into the hand Jericho," again cried the Lord, and this Canaanite stronghold soon fell, after a short siege. In both cases it is God who does the real work. He it was who separated the Jordan waters so that the people passed over on dry ground. And it was He who caused the wall of Jericho to fall down flat. Joshua was simply the obedient agent of his God.

And later, at Gibeon, when Joshua faced the test of a crucial battle, it is the Lord who determined the victory, first by sending a disastrous hail storm, and then by halting the sun and moon. "The Lord fought for Israel," as the narrative says. So Joshua, an obedient servant, with the strength and courage proclaimed by our Golden Text, fought under God.

Sanity . . . comes with work

One result of the depression has been to bring a good many people back to a sane outlook on life and the world they live in. That is particularly true among young men and women who never had to think about where the money came from. I know a good many of that kind and nearly all of them are finding the kind of life where they have to do things for themselves much more satisfying than an existence in which everything was done for them.

Douglas . . . he can figure

If and when Mr. Woodin resigns, the man slated to take his place as Secretary of the Treasury is Lewis Douglas, Director of the Budget. Mr. Douglas has had the respect of official Washington for a good many years. He was the lone Congressman from Arizona for several terms, and that made him a much more important figure than either of the Senators from that State. He fought a valiant but losing fight against the Boulder Dam project, which made him a lot of enemies, but a lot more friends.

Security . . . doubtful course

I have just got word that the Association for Old Age Security has changed its name to the Association for Social Security. Having succeeded in getting half the states to adopt old pension laws, the men behind this movement are now starting out to get legislation which will provide, as they put it "social insurance against old age dependency, and unemployment."

Many Turkeys Brooded

Dallas—S. J. McKee, south of Independence, and C. C. Deter, near Oak Grove, have a total of 10,500 turkeys on their two farms—enough to supply every family in Polk county with a bird for both Thanksgiving and Christmas, it has been estimated. They plan soon to replace these with about 11,000 more. Both are using steam boilers to provide heat for brooding the young poufs, and a large house divided into small pens to house them. Each pen has a sun porch. They plan to sell the first batch at about eight weeks and replace them with a new batch, to be raised on their own farms.

our American idea. The European idea is to justify low wages by providing for public care of the worker in time of stress.

I don't like the European system. It destroys ambition and incentive to good work. Sooner or later it will destroy the nations that adopt it. But I'm afraid that's what we are heading for.

Brakes . . . and accidents

I got into trouble on the road the other day. For the first time in nearly thirty years of motoring I was caught violating the law! I had just taken my car out of the garage, where it had been laid up since last Fall, and neglected to drive over to the inspection station and get a 1933 certificate that my brakes and lights were in good condition.

In Massachusetts nobody may drive a car without a paster on the windshield certifying that it has had an official brake and light test within six months. I had only last year's sticker, so a motorcycle cop held me up and proved me wrong. I think the Massachusetts law is a good one. I've just seen a report from the Travelers Insurance Company, which keeps tab on automobile accidents, which says that in the past year there has been an increase of fatal accidents due to faulty brakes. Part of that is due to so many old cars being still in use, but most of it is due to the failure, in most states, to require periodical brake inspection and to keep cars that haven't been certified off the highways.

Taxes . . . from our pockets

Everybody pays taxes. That is what politicians try to conceal from the voters. In the long run all taxes are paid by the ultimate consumer. There is no way of taxing the rich, which which do not pass on to the less well-to-do. If you buy a taxed article of merchandise, such as cigarettes, playing cards, automobiles or gasoline, you pay the tax. And the customers of a store are the ones who, in the long run, pay the storekeeper's income and other taxes.

POWER IN WORDS

If you were given the task of advertising to the world that God cares enormously for one human life—no matter how wayward and wrong the life may be—how could you phrase a message more memorable than the parable of the lost sheep? How simple; how direct; how splendidly crisp and direct Jesus told it. Benjamin Franklin in his autobiography—that first great American "success story"—tells the process through which he went in acquiring an effective style. He would read a passage from some great master of English, then some great master of English, then he would take the passage and attempt to reproduce the thoughts in his own words. Comparing his version with the original, he discovered wherein he had obscured the thought, or wasted words, or failed in driving straight to the point. Every advertising man ought to study the parables of Jesus in the same language, schooling himself in their fashion and learning the four big elements of their power.

First of all they are marvelously condensed, as all good advertising must be. Charles A. Dana once issued an assignment to a new reporter on the New York Sun, directing him to confine his article to a column. The reporter protested that the story was too big to be compressed into so small a space. "Get a copy of the Bible and read the first chapter of Genesis," said Dana. "You'll be surprised to find that the whole story of the creation of the world can be told in 600 words."

Two men spoke on the battlefield of Gettysburg sixty years ago. The first delivered an oration of more than two hours in length; not one person in ten who reads this page can even recall his name. The second speaker uttered two hundred and fifty words, and those words, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, are a part of the mental endowment of almost every American.

sent up to the Throne of Grace—long impressive utterances. The prayer which Jesus taught his disciples consists of sixty-eight words, and can be written on the back of a post-card. Many poems and essays have been penned by writers who hoped that they were making a permanent place for themselves in literature; but the greatest poem ever written consists of one hundred and eighty-eight words. It is the Twenty-Third Psalm.
