GETTING OUT OF DEBT.

WE HAVE seen a statement recently prepared by men who have made a deep study of the subject, that the United States and its inhabitants are in debt to the tune of one hundred and thirty-four billion dollars.

There is no manner of doubt in the great boom era credit was far too easy, men and institutions went into debt recklessly, and that the great problem of the hour is how debtors can be enabled to pay their debts without at the same time ruining their creditors.

The problem of the debtor who can't pay is as old as humanity. In the 15th chapter of Deuteronomy we find the way in which the ancient Israelites solved it.

Perhaps too many debtors of our day expect to be released without any payment whatever. We would not go so far as to advocate the Chinese system, under which for thousands of years every Chinese had to settle all his debts every New Year's Day.

Forgiveness of debts was one of the tenets of the early Christians, and the plea comes down to us in the Lord's Prayer.

Perhaps too many debtors of our day expect to be released without any payment whatever. We would not go so far as to advocate the Chinese system, under which for thousands of years every Chinese had to settle all his debts every New Year's Day.

creditors. But we do believe that most of us would be better off if we had never been able to borrow on long terms, but only for short periods, and then only as much as we could satisfy a reasonable creditor we could pay when due.

BUILDING UP OUR NAVY.

IT IS good news in more ways than one that the United States is starting out to build our Navy up to the limit permitted under our naval treaties with Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan.

We say that with no belligerent spirit. We hope we shall never have to use our Navy for anything but police duty. But these are unsettled days in international affairs, and we do not believe that our nation, the most powerful in the world, should drop into a position of inferiority as compared with other sea powers.

We are either too cowardly or too stingy to provide for our national defense. From that state of mind it is but a step for some of them to find an excuse for trying to use force to take something away from us.

The spending of $238,000,000 in new naval construction will not only bring our Navy up to full treaty standards, but it will provide immediate work for a great number of wage-earners. The Government estimates that more than 18,000 men will be employed directly in the shipyards.

Greed . . . in human nature

Nellie Gray died a few weeks ago. A chronic invalid, tricked out of her inheritance as a young woman, she had been the town pauper of West Stockbridge, Mass., for twenty years.

One of Nellie's relations ever did anything for her when she was poor. He was a cousin who was almost as hard up as she was. But as soon as she got her inheritance relatives flocked to her house from all directions.

In this imperfect world it is not often that I run across a human situation which so well bears out the belief that right and justice will always triumph in the end.

Superstition . pains inside

In my boyhood I used to hear back country people say that it was dangerous to drink from an open stream or spring.

I imagine that belief is as old as humanity. Folk ignorant of physiology attributed internal pains to some sort of actual reptile in their vitals.

According to this story a young woman walking on the beach picked up what she thought was a pearl. She put it in her mouth and accidentally swallowed it.

THAT FLU FLU BIRD.

To the Editor: "You have heard of the flu flu bird that flies backward. It wants to see where it has been. It doesn't give a darn where it is going. Don't be a flu flu bird!"

Humor . . . with cheese

The funniest sayings are often not so intended. The best bit of unconscious humor which I have heard lately was told to me by a very able woman physician who specializes in mental cases in a New England city.

Chance . . . and a "dud"

At a church lawn-party not long ago I heard the minister's daughter complain, half seriously, that young men shy off from girls who live in a parsonage.

Her father, overhearing her, remarked: "You make me think of a Methodist parsonage in England, where there were two daughters. They may have felt much as you do, but those two girls gave the world two of today's most famous men.

I saw the minister's daughter a little later, talking earnestly with a young college professor on vacation, whom most of the village girls have branded as a "dud." I couldn't be sure, but I thought she was letting him hold her hand.

Jobs . . . first-rate men

The mark of a first-rate man is that he is not above taking a second-rate job if there is a chance in it to prove his own first-rateness.

One young man I know lost his job in the hardest part of the depression. He tried anything else he could get to do, but all he could get was a chance to sell advertising on commission.
