

News of CAMP BULL PRAIRIE

By Our Camp Correspondent.
Harvey Tavro, our third baseman, is now recovering from a sprained ankle. He will be able to play again this Sunday against the Frog Heaven team.
And again our baseball team challenges all comers! Arrangements for games can be made through Mr. Sanders, the general clerk of Camp Bull Prairie.
Embarrassing moments: While enroute to Baker the boys at Captain Parker's sandwiches by mistake. Was his face red?
Eventually Captain Wehle was acquitted by a court martial after the boys of Camp Bull Prairie testified in his favor.
The mess hall was opened Wednesday, July 12. Ice cream was a treat for the boys that evening. Your correspondent noticed that Louis Goodman and Hymie Blumberg, the two camp gold-brickers, suddenly awoke and showed plenty of speed in obtaining a portion of that delicious ice cream.
Nortman Minick, one of the Pendleton boys, was caught sleeping in the same bed with a bull snake.
And finally, Russ Wright, one of the local boys, got an idea he was sergeant of the guard Sunday night. He appointed Jack Casteed as his corporal, and they proceeded to police the tents to make sure that everybody was properly tucked in and unclothed. After stepping into the tent in which the local boys slept, they suddenly awoke after being doused with a bucket of water. What a night!
Several visitors on Sunday last took advantage of the invitation that had been extended to them through the courtesy of the Heppner Gazette Times. Consequently, this item has been prepared chiefly for the benefit of those who will come to see the camp and have a good time.
Captain Hugh C. Parker, Lieut. August Zaccor, and Lieut. Garrecht have full charge of the camp and its activities. They are responsible for the administration, feeding, housing, sanitation and medical care of the boys.
On the other hand, W. E. O. Criger, camp superintendent, has full charge of the work projects. He is ably assisted by Mr. Davis, the senior foreman and fire chief of the camp. They are responsible for the designating, designing and supervising of the work. All these projects are directly in charge of trained foresters and skilled woodsmen who act as supervisors.
The work of the boys will consist mainly in the construction and maintenance of forest protection improvements. They include 40 miles of new truck trails to aid in the transportation of men and equipment to forest fires. And in addition to this number 40 miles will be maintained.
The telephone crew will reconstruct about 30 miles of woods telephone lines to speed up forest fire communication, and remove them to the roads; about 68 miles of drift or stock fence will be built; some springs will be recovered; steel and wood lookout towers to aid in the detection of forest fires will likewise be constructed, in addition to improvement work at ranger and guard stations.
In addition to all these improvements there will be jobs such as the cruising of 50,000 acres, as well as the destroying of rodents in a large area, and control work in bug-infested areas.
Finally, since fire hazards consist of various things, every camp visitor is urged by Mr. Criger to follow posted rules carefully. They are as follows:
1. Do not smoke while traveling.
2. Always carry a bucket, shovel and axe when camping.
3. Get a permit from the forest guard before making a camp fire.
4. Always make sure your camp fire is completely out before leaving.

will ply its course carrying the commerce of an empire lighted and powered by its harnessed energy; an empire made green by its waters, and made safe from those waters running wild at flood season.
A baby elk became stranded, was picked up by folks at a farm near Ukiah. A beautiful little long-legged, long-eared creature, it is sensitive of nature, becomes friendly only after tested acquaintance; shys from strangers and children.
One cannot look at the baby elk and believe it would do anyone harm. Still, it is said elk have increased in numbers in places to an extent to be bothersome. For this reason, supposedly, the season was opened on them in Umatilla, Union and Wallawa counties. Those with horns only may be killed. But one wonders, after so few years have passed when elk were rare indeed, if they really are so numerous, and whether, maybe, after while there will be no more baby elk to make up with slowly, and to shy at strangers.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

MARY A. NOTSON, Reporter.
On Friday, July 21, the voters of Oregon will vote upon several very important measures. Every voter should strive to make up his or her mind and vote conscientiously upon each measure. Among the measures to be voted upon are the proposed 21st amendment to the United States constitution and the amendment to the state constitution repealing the prohibition amendments.
If you vote for either of the proposed amendments on the ballot, you are voting against prohibition, for both amendments on the ballot are for repeal of prohibition. Hence, if you desire to sustain national prohibition and preserve the 18th amendment, vote 301 X No. I vote against the proposed amendment. If you wish to vote to sustain the state prohibition amendments, vote 315 X No. I vote against the repeal of the law.
The repealists are not offering a thing to take the place of prohibition. They can not agree among themselves. The people who expect to make money out of the liquor business are not concerned about what may take the place of prohibition if it is repealed. They

On August 6 the Rhea Creek grange will be host for a public picnic in the mountains. No definite place has yet been decided upon for the meeting but as soon as arrangements are completed they will be given out through this column. Students at O. S. C. Cut Social Costs in Half Corvallis—Students at Oregon State college cut their social costs more than in half last year without sacrificing anything essential in interesting and wholesome social life, according to the annual report on such costs made by Dr. U. G. Dubach, dean of men.

Members of the 57 fraternities, sororities and other living groups spent only a total of $5612.21 compared with $13,251.61 the year previous for social events given by their organizations. The average cost per member was only $3.18 for the year, compared with $5.58 for the year previous and $7.15 two years ago.
Dr. Dubach reports that students used their ingenuity and initiative in giving excellent parties at low cost. His office encouraged holding many events so as to provide recreation for all on the campus rather than depending on more expensive commercial amusements.
There may be no relationship, but the fact is that the students made this low-cost social record the same year that their scholastic average mounted to a new high point.

Newspapers Play Part in Wheat Adjustment

Local newspapers throughout the wheat belt in Oregon and elsewhere are being looked to to play an important part in the application and administration of the wheat adjustment plan, according to word received by the Oregon Extension Service. Use of the press for publication of past production records of growers and the later allotment figures is expected to simplify greatly the arrival at fair production quotas for each individual.
Growers are being asked by those in charge of putting the wheat plan into effect to prepare two important items of information to have ready in advance of their application to join the wheat benefit plan. The information wanted is first, the number of bushels of wheat grown each year from 1929 to 1932, and second, the number of acres planted in each of these years.
By using elevator, freight, threshing, or bank deposit records, administration officials believe that accurate estimates can be made. These figures turned in by each farmer are to be published in the local press. This is intended to encourage any carelessly inclined to be more accurate, as any boosting of production reports so as to get a higher allotment tends to damage the neighbors rather than the government, as the county allotment is fixed in advance.
Believing that farmers will be anxious to avail themselves of the benefits under the new wheat plan, unauthorized promoters are already appearing and trying to "chisel in" on the farmers' expected returns, the government officials report.
In one state at least, and perhaps in others, farmers are being approached with the offer of help in making applications to receive cash benefits under the wheat plan—for 10 per cent of the proceeds! No
