

CAMP BOYS STAGE THRILLING BOUTS

Capacity Crowd Witnesses Smoker at Open Air Enclosure; Devito Gets K. O. in Main Event.

(Bull Prairie Correspondent) Giving a taste of what may be expected at the same place at the coming Rodeo, Sept. 8-9, boys from Camp Bull Prairie staged a series of fast bouts at the open air enclosure on Main street Saturday night, keeping the capacity crowd thoroughly thrilled.

Two knockouts featured the card, with Mike Devito winning over Frankie Milo by this route in the Main event to provide a fitting climax.

The other knockout was scored by George Bielman, when Eddie Korn, his opponent, was unable to continue the fight after a minute and a half of boxing due to a dislocated thumb.

The opening contest, bringing together Sam Rafsky and William Perillo, was declared a draw as Perillo's aggressiveness was offset by Rafsky's superior boxing.

The feature wrestling match between Tony "Ironides" Pittelli and Ialo "Cyclone" Civil had the crowd in a continuous uproar.

After a short rest, both wrestlers were at it again doubly furious. Pittelli vainly tried to pin the wily Civil's shoulders to the mat in order to even the count, but although Pittelli was the aggressor throughout, his tremendous strength was not sufficient, and he was forced to suffer a second fall and to lose the match.

In the second round Patti turned the tables and this time Kay suffered a knock-down, but again no count was taken.

The last round was even faster than either preceding round, and once more Mansoor scored a knock-down. When the verdict was announced, everyone was satisfied, including the boxers.

The main event in the face of all these previous thrills was even more exciting to witness. Milo rushed Devito at the gong and had the blonde-haired lad back-peddling furiously.

Three referees officiated, who were Russ Wright, Luke Bibby and Harvey Bauman.

Staging a rally in the last half of the fifth inning, Bull Prairie scored five runs to upset the Lexington team, 6-5, last Sunday at the Heppner Rodeo grounds.

Coming up in the fifth with the bases full, Pintavalle blasted a double to left center that drove three of his comrades scurrying over the plate.

Then Howard Evans gave Bull Prairie the lead by blasting a home run to the left field fence amid a shrieking chorus of approbation.

That shot gave Bull Prairie the contest, 6-5, and squared the two-game series at one apiece.

Lexington's big scoring thrust came in the first. Palmer singled, raced to third on V. Munkers' single, and when Evans made a bad throw, he scored.

Portable Canneries Now Conserve Relief Foods. Self-help for the unemployed, conservation of abundant summer food, and accumulation of needed food supplies for relief purposes are things being attained in at least seven Oregon counties through the operation of special county canning equipment, several outfits of which are portable.

With E. H. Wiegand, head of the horticultural products department at Oregon State college, giving his expert supervision, county courts, relief committees, the Red Cross, and the extension service have joined forces in most of these seven counties to equip and operate these canneries solely in the interest of relief work.

Complete portable canneries are now being operated in Marion, Linn and Lane counties. Semi-portable canneries or stationary outfits are doing similar work in Clackamas, Wasco, Coos and Jackson counties.

Hot weather calls for iced coffee—try 3 or 4 drops Watkins' Vanilla in each glass. Gives a wonderful flavor and aroma—but it has to be Watkins' to be truly delicious.

O.S.C. Scientist Reports Progress to Poultrymen. Development of six batches of pure culture of the six types of chicken coccidiosis is an accomplishment of Dr. W. T. Johnson, poultry pathologist at Oregon State college, shared only by scientists at Harvard university.

It may sound like an impractical pastime to isolate what might be considered "certified seed" of these intestinal parasites, but some 200 Oregon poultrymen who attended the tenth annual state convention at Corvallis learned that such an accomplishment is absolutely fundamental to actual development of what is hoped to be a practical method of immunizing chickens against this most universal and destructive poultry disease.

In a rapid-fire report of his progress in this field of research, Dr. Johnson gave his listeners a clear understanding of the immense amount of painstaking scientific work involved in trying to conquer this disease, showed the probability of ultimate results, urged a continuation of sanitary control measures now used by the best poultrymen, and warned against the flood of so-called remedies not founded on fundamental facts.

This was but one of the highlights of a "meaty" educational program at the convention, arranged by the poultry department in conjunction with the Oregon State Poultrymen's association.

Visitors learned about the relationship of the national recovery act to the agricultural adjustment act, heard about the importance of maintaining the quality of products in holding eastern markets, and were told of the growing importance of middle-western competition.

The association passed resolutions urging that poultry products be brought under the benefits of the agricultural adjustment act, protesting against any reduction in federal support to land grant colleges, and urging the state board of higher education to continue the research work in poultry disease control.
