REFORMING BUSINESS.

BY ADOPTING a new set of rules which will make it very much more difficult for the little fellow with a few dollars to speculate in stocks, the New York Stock Exchange has gone a long way toward curing the worst evils of speculation.

Both these great exchanges have acted as they did only under pressure from Washington. It has dawned upon the federal authorities that no organization or group can be trusted to purge itself of the evils which it has countenanced and which its operations involve.

The greatest effort ever attempted by our Government to reform business practices and bring about better distribution of products and profits as between employer and employee is now being made.

We are like the majority of Americans, we believe, in hoping that the New Deal works as it is planned. If it does accomplish its end of putting people back to work at better wages and so restoring prosperity, we think that most of those who are grumbling now will forget that they didn't like the idea.

IT'S UP TO THE FARMER.

THE regulation of the cotton and cigar tobacco crops by the Federal Government is now in effect. The regulation of wheat production is practically in operation.

We have started out, as a nation, on the largest experiment in history in this business of what Assistant Secretary Rexford G. Tugwell calls "a sensible working policy for our land."

Whether this policy will work or not depends, naturally, upon individual farmers. Government has no power under the law, as we understand it, to force any farmer to keep land out of cultivation or to reduce crops; it cannot dictate to him whether he shall sow wheat or corn, raise hogs or sheep.

As Professor Tugwell pointed out the other day, France attempted about the same time to control the overproduction of wine grapes; and today France actually controls its wheat acreage and imports so that the French farmer now gets the equivalent of $2 a bushel for his wheat.

If this allotment plan works it will be because our farmers are intelligent and far-sighted enough to make it work. If the majority of them do not cooperate in the effort to bring American agriculture up to its proper place as not only the major industry but the most uniformly profitable one, the failure of the Administration's plan will be their fault and nobody's else.

Sulfur Helps Grant County Land

Canyon City—Belief that a good deal of ground in the Prairie City section of Grant county can be brought back to far heavier production by the application of sulfur is expressed by R. G. Johnson, county agent. He cites an example of the results of this fertilizer on the Edgar Deardorf ranch where a very poor alfalfa stand which had been sulfured showed a greatly thickened stand due to increased stooling, and other improvements.

Disarmament new concept

My friend Norman Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, is hopeful that, after seven years of discussion, international disarmament will soon get somewhere.

Nobody is asking any nation to abandon its defenses. The program which is coming to be accepted most everywhere is that nations should not be permitted to provide themselves with the sort of weapons which are useful only for the invasion of another nation's territory.

If Germany had not had the great Krupp and Skoda guns it could never have invaded Belgium in 1914. Big mobile guns and big tanks would be abolished by such an agreement as the nations at Geneva are talking about.

Now there is a genuine belief that permanent peace is close at hand.

Progress . . . it is actual

A hundred years ago Europe had a population of 180 millions of people most of them frequently on the verge of starvation. That was as far as the world had got in the 12 centuries since European civilization really began.

That is a lot of progress to make in a hundred years. People who talk of the "good old times" are talking about the lives of the small minority who lived in what was regarded as luxury while the common people were practically slaves.

When people tell you the world is going backward and that the age of invention, beginning with the steam engine, has not improved human conditions, tell them to run along and read their history books.

Land . . . for all

There is land enough in the United States—nearly 20 thousand million acres—to give every family more than 60 acres, if it were divided equally. If only ten percent of the land is suitable for the growth of foods, there is an average of 6 acres per family of four.

It seems nonsensical to talk of anyone starving to death in America, when at least a living can be got from the soil.

What we are trying to do, of course, is to get more than a living; to get a surplus for the desirable but strictly unnecessary things of civilization.

Goodwill . . . from Seattle

When Edward Stevens, an amateur radio operator in Seattle, "talking" by wireless with another operator on Kodiak Island, off the Alaska coast, was told that an Eskimo boy there was pretty sick and nobody knew what to do about it, it would have been easy for him to have remarked that that was just too bad, and think no more of it.

He had his radio friend on Kodiak describe the boy's symptoms. He telephoned them to a Seattle doctor, who diagnosed the case as probably peritonitis and suggested that if there were any way to get the sick boy to the hospital at Anchorage, Alaska, he might have a chance.

As a result of the work of the commission which Captain Hobson heads, organized under the League of Nations, 39 nations have just signed a treaty agreeing to limit the production of narcotics to actual medical requirements.

Dope . . . a world treaty

The other day I had a visit with Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, Spanish War hero and former member of Congress from Alabama, who has for years been devoting his life to the effort to stamp out the international traffic in narcotics, such as morphine, cocaine and hashish.

As a result of the work of the commission which Captain Hobson heads, organized under the League of Nations, 39 nations have just signed a treaty agreeing to limit the production of narcotics to actual medical requirements.

new crop of drug addicts and the old ones will have died off. I think he is unduly optimistic, but I hope he's not. I have seen enough myself of the effects of the narcotic habit on men and women to realize what it does to them and to society, but also to realize how hard it is to break an addict of the habit.

Forest Report Shows Trees Are Seeding Well

The annual seed crop reports from the rangers on the national forests in Washington and Oregon, compiled by the Pacific Northwest Forest Experiment station show that some seed is being produced by all tree species in parts of the region this season, but only in a few places are heavy cone crops reported.

Douglas fir, the most important timber species west of the Cascades, was reported to have a heavy crop in the Packwood Lake region on the Columbia forest, along the Sauk river on the Mt. Baker forest, near Peshatin on the Wenatchee forest, and Kamela on the Umatilla forest, the heavy crops being mostly on young trees.

Ponderosa Pine is bearing a heavy crop in the vicinity of Seneca and Kamela, Oregon, and Peshatin, Washington. Western red cedar has a heavy crop along the western slope of the Cascades but not along the Coast or east of the mountains.

From the Mt. Hood forest comes the report of a heavy cone crop of western hemlock, noble fir and white fir, and from the Rogue River forest the report of a heavy crop of western white and sugar pine.

These seed crop reports of all forest trees sent in to the Pacific Northwest Forest Experiment station from 40 localities on 20 national forests serve as a guide for seed collection activities of state and federal agencies and private collectors. Private companies have built up a sizeable industry selling tree seeds both to domestic and foreign trade.

The seed crop reports are also a fairly reliable indicator of the amount of natural reproduction that will occur on logged-off land provided it is protected from fire. As a result of the moderately heavy Douglas fir cone crop in 1932, seedlings were more abundant this year than any season since 1924 following the heavy cone crop of 1923.

NUMBING GRIP OF ANCIENT CREEDS

Ask any ten people what Jesus meant by his "Father's business," and nine of them will answer "preaching." To interpret the words in this narrow sense is to lose the real significance of his life. It was not to preach that he came into the world; nor to teach; nor to heal.

These are all departments of his Father's business, but the business itself is far larger, more inclusive. If human life has any significance it is this—that God has set going here an experiment to which all His resources are committed. He seeks to develop human beings, superior to circumstance, victorious over Fate.

No single kind of human talent or effort can be spared if the experiment is to succeed. The race must be fed and clothed and housed and transported, as well as preached to, and taught and healed.

Thus all business is his Father's business. All work is worship; all useful service prayer. And whoever works wholeheartedly at any worthy calling is a co-worker with the Almighty in the great enterprise which He has initiated but which He can never finish without the help of men.

It is one thing to talk about success, and quite another thing to win it. Jesus spoke of crowns and died on a cross. He talked of his kingdom, and ended his days amid the jeers and taunts of his enemies.

visit, spent a few years in re-proving men for their mistakes, died and went back to Heaven again. A hollow bit of stage-play. What chance for temptation in such a career? How can an actor go wrong when his whole part is written and learned in advance?

It is frightfully hard to free the mind from the numbing grip of ancient creeds. But let us make the high spots in this finest, most exalted success story, considering now the perils and crises of success.

He was not at all sure where he was going when he laid down his tools and turned his back on the carpenter shop—unless we believe this, his struggle ceases to be "in all points" like our own; for each of us has to venture on life as on to an uncharted sea.

NEWS SERVICE RESTORED

Efforts of Oregon farm organizations, cooperatives, produce dealers, civic bodies and individuals in protesting the abandonment of the government leased wire market news service in the northwest have been successful, and orders are now issued to resume nearly all former activities starting August 28.
