OUT TO GET HIM

DR. WILLIAM JASPER KERR, socially ostracized among the Eugene and University of Oregon alumni elite, is being subjected to a campaign of character assassination intended to oust him from the chancellorship of Oregon higher education.

Just what there has been in the atmosphere of the university campus in years past to bring about the existing superiority complex which pervades the ego of those who are now exhibiting the bitter fruition of the complex—is a subject for a psychoanalyst.

Dr. Kerr is being assailed entirely by hints and innuendo. His assailants have uncovered nothing definitely wrong with his administration under the existing set-up.

The new laws regulating banks and the sale of securities should make it safer than ever for the "little fellow" to put part of his surplus into them.

A SHORT SERMON.

OUT of all the welter of talk about restoring economic prosperity we seem to hear echoing down the ages an admonition which most of us too easily forget:

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

We are constantly being reminded of our "duty" to society, to the nation and the state, as if that were the first and most important concern of mankind.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. Charles E. Dunn, D. D.

SOME EARLY LEADERS OF ISRAEL.

Lesson for September 24th.

Hebrews 11:32-12:2.

Golden Text: Ephesians 6:10.

We have come to another review lesson. It has been a pleasure to study the personalities and careers of some representative early leaders of the Hebrew folk.

Carlyle, in his famous "Heroes and Hero-Worship," tells us that history "is at the bottom the History of the Great Men who have worked here."

A great man, he further says, "is the living light-fountain, which it is good and pleasant to be near."

Now while Carlyle doubtless exaggerates the significance of the great leader, and underestimates the importance of those underlying social forces that produce him, his reverence for heroes is sound and wholesome.

"When the high heart we magnify, And the sure vision celebrate, And worship greatness passing by, Ourselves are great."

The lessons of our quarter have made us acquainted with twelve characters, nine men and three women. We started with Joshua, the embodiment of obedience, then shook hands with Caleb, that courageous explorer, and next met Deborah, the Bible's Joan of Arc.

Then we skipped ahead, for a moment, and listened to Isaiah hurling thunderbolts against the evildoers of his day.

Returning to the early period, we saw Gideon and his three hundred launch their spectacular attack against the Midianites.

The scene now changes to the charming idyl of Ruth, one of the sweetest love stories in the world.

Then we listened to the fervent prayer of Hannah for the gift of Samuel, and studied the biography of a famous Judge. Saul, the most tragic figure in the Old Testament, so splendid in his beginning, so miserable in his end, next confronted us, followed by David, the shepherd boy who rose to be the most cherished of Israel's kings.

The noble-hearted Jonathan then engaged our attention, and, finally, we sat at the feet of Solomon, the wisest.

What an inspiring list of heroes and heroines! Thankful to God should we be for them all.

cowardice in Dr. Kerr's past record, and it is not likely that he will yield lightly to the clamor of the despotic egotists. A greater opportunity for service now presents itself before him—to stay on the job and purge the university atmosphere of that which engendered such a complex as is displayed by his assailants.

SAVING IS ESSENTIAL.

PEOPLE who write about economics divide all the things which people spend money for into two classes: "consumer goods" and "capital goods." Consumer goods, as we understand it, include everything that people use up and have to replace in a shorter or longer time, such as stockings, automobiles, radio sets, and food.

Most of the talk in connection with the N.R.A. and the "buy now" appeal seems to be about consumer goods. Of course, there must be trade in consumer goods, but it is our notion that real prosperity has always been based upon large investments in capital goods.

Capital, for the larger part, consists of the accumulated surplus of great numbers of people, deposited in banks or invested in shares of corporations, where it can be handled in large volume, to finance the purchase of capital goods.

The new laws regulating banks and the sale of securities should make it safer than ever for the "little fellow" to put part of his surplus into them.

Red-Heads they do things

There is something about red-heads that seems to imbue them with more than the average of intelligence, energy, ambition and perseverance. My friend William Roovers, who used to employ several hundred girls, would have none but red-heads in his factory and office.

Teamwork . . . emergency

If all human beings were endowed with the spirit of teamwork, it would not be difficult to organize our economic life. The biggest difficulty which confronts the people who are trying to put the Industrial Recovery Act into effect is that most of us want to have our own way.

Sobieski . . . tradition

Two hundred and fifty years ago, on September 12, 1683, the fate of Europe and of all that we call "Western Civilization" was decided by the sword of Jan Sobieski, King of Poland.

Houses and environment

"One-Way" glass has just been patented by Frederic A. Delano, a relative of President Roosevelt. Light will pass through this new glass in one direction but not in the other.

Press . . . guards freedom

Next month there will be a celebration of the 200th anniversary of the trial of Peter Zenger. Zenger was the editor of the New York Weekly Journal, who dared to publish the report of an election against the orders of the Colonial Governor, William Cosby, whose candidate had been defeated.

Huckleberry Days Bring Many Ideas for Their Use

Oregon huckleberries may be served fresh at this season in many delicious dishes or stored away for next winter in the form of fruit juice, jam, conserve, jelly or canned remolds.

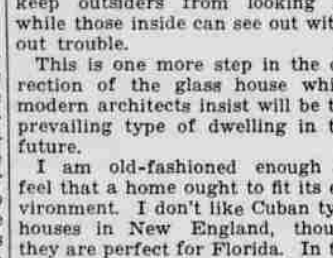

Water Increases Polk Hop Yields

Dallas—Between 1900 and 1500 acres of hops are being grown under irrigation in Polk county, and the yield in these fields has been increased from 300 to 500 pounds above that on acreages not receiving water, according to J. R. Beck, county agent.

Common Alfalfa Dead; Grimm Not

Lakeview—A large bare brown spot in the middle of a 40-acre alfalfa field on the Jack O'Keefe farm at Adel, visible from all parts of the valley, was causing considerable question and comment until inquiry brought out the fact that Mr. O'Keefe was planting the field to Grimm alfalfa, but ran out of Grimm seed and completed the seeding with Surprise Valley common alfalfa.

That was the first victory in a battle for the freedom of the press which began with the publication of the first newspaper, and is still going on. Authority has always tried to make the press subservient to its will.

So long as the press is free to tell the people the truth about what Government is doing or trying to do, human liberties are safe. Suppress the press and those in power can do what they like. The first act of a dictator is always to put the newspaper under restraint.

Bruce Barton writes of "The Master Executive"

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the heavy-burdened who will find every human trial paralleled in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows"

"WHAT GAINETH IT?"

In Jesus' hour of the second crisis he proved his right to be the silent partner in every modern business; to sit at the head of every directors' table. There is no mere theorizing in his words; he speaks out of what he himself has proved. If he says that a man's work is more eternally important than any title, he has a right to speak. He himself refused the highest title, "King." If he says that there are things more vital than merely making money let no one question his authority.
