THE REVISED BUDGET.

A NEW budget has been prepared for the Heppner schools.

The first flare of combat over the budget presented last week subsidbudget presented last week subsid-ed into calm discussion of the prob-miration of those with whom they lems presented, with opponents and proponents showing consideration for the well-being of the schools and what they represent as well as for the stressed conditions of the taxpayers.

From these discussions the school board chose its course, the appointment of a new budget committee.
This committee, with the board, had the benefit of opinions of the former budget committee and those who opposed the former budget, in drawing up the new budget which putes. they present as truly picturing the financial needs of the schools for the coming year.

In the discussions it was brought big increase in the proposed levy came in the item of outstanding warrant indebtedness. This item of $50,800 was partially offset by including estimated receipts from delinquent taxes of $31,623.66, leaving a balance of $20,166.34 to pay off warrant indebtedness, if collected, included in the amount of the levy.

The logical argument prevailing in the discussion was: Why levy again to pay warrants for which taxes had already been levied? If the taxes that had been levied were Reference a Notern Public in one taxes had already been levied? If the taxes that had been levied were not paid, what chance would there be for payment of another levy for the same purpose? Such a levy was but pyramiding the obligation of taxpayers to pay indebtedness making it that much harder for them to pay and redeem their property, for the back taxes as well as the new levy must be paid by property-owners to keep from losing their property. It was also argued that carrying any amount as estimated receipts from delinquent taxes was a mistake, because there is no certainty what amount of these may be paid.

The budget committee accepted

COMES THE DAWN.

THE issue is now being forced as to whether William Jasper Kerr, chancellor of higher education, shall be the administrative head of the university of Oregon.

This week the faculty of the university voted unanimously for the resignation of Roscoe Nelson, chairman of the board of higher education, not so much, as they would have it appear, because Mr Nelson made an unconscionable attack upon them, but because Mr. Nelson's attack afforded an opportunity for which they were looking, to strike at Mr. Kerr.

If one could doubt the sincerity of Mr. Nelson's stand, one might say that his appearance in Eugene

Managing Editor, Vawter Crawfor

The budget committee accepted this argument as logical, but found a condition to exist which did not permit relying entirely on the payment of delinquent taxes to redeem the outstanding warrants. There had been issued in warrants some $7000, representing capital investment, for which so far no levy had been made. It was to cover this item and to make up for a certain amount of delinquent taxes that would not be collected that the committee allowed an item of $9000 to cover warrant indebtedness.

The committee, however, ignored entirely any estimated receipts from delinquent taxes, and in balancing the budget found that the $22,000 to be raised by taxation was but a 6 percent increase over the levy made last year.

In view of the fact that big cuts in the levy were made the last two years, and last year's levy being almost 50 percent less than the levy three years ago, they believe there should be no general objection to the new budget. They realize, as has been often expressed in the budget discussions, that the only solution to the present tax difficulties lies in increased incomes generally, so that more people may be addition.
