WHAT COURSE TO TAKE?

THE special session of the legislature convened at Salem next Monday. The all-engrossing problem before it, the problem forced upon its members by mandate of the state constitution, is that of providing revenues for the orderly conduct of government.

The stringent times have complicated the problem in many ways, notably by the necessity of raising additional funds for unemployment relief in the face of generally constricted incomes.

The recent regular legislative assembly attempted to solve the problem, which appears no less serious at this time, by providing a sales tax measure. This attempt, with whatever of merit it may have held, was nullified when the people voted down the proposed measure in July.

Retrospection reveals that before and during the last legislative session the thought of the political leaders of the state was centered almost entirely upon new revenue producing measures. It is evident that the thought of the state and local governments while relieving the burden of taxes placed on real property. At that time only a few of the legislators recognized an angle which it now appears will hold the center of the stage when the problem is dealt with at the coming session—the angle of tax collection.

The leaders, with the Portland Oregonian as spokesman, who battled to the finish for the sales tax, are now searching into the collection angle, and their solution so far proposed appears to be as commendatory and exacting of the prospective taxpayer as their former measure was condoling to, and considerate of him.

The stand taken seems to imply that those at the helm of state government, and their champion newspaper, are determined the state shall get its money or in lieu thereof, of the pound of flesh. The constitutional mandate may justify this stand. There need be no accusation of ulterior motives.

They have asked newspapers over the state, "What do you think of the collection legislation?" Views are sought on the advisability of reinstating a penalty for non-payment of taxes when due, raising the interest rate on delinquent taxes, and offering a discount for cash prepayment of taxes; or if not these, other measures that might help to bring in the tax money.

Strong arguments have been published by the Oregonian and other newspapers over the state, but mainly in the Willamette valley, in favor of making the tax collection laws much more stringent, citing reinstatement of penalty and raising the interest rate as laudable measures. But this argument can only be based on the premise that people have the money with which to pay their taxes and are wilfully evading the payment.

Eastern Oregon takes issue with the premise, admitting that there may be some people open to the accusation—how many in the Willamette valley, they do not know—but contends that the majority of her people are not paying taxes because they haven't sufficient cash income with which to meet them.

It must be admitted there are two ways of attacking the problem. One way is to get the money to meet government expenditures. The other is to cut down the expenditures.

If the Oregonian's word is to be taken for it there are no longer any big incomes in Oregon to tax. Certain it is that small incomes have shrunk, some of them dried up entirely, so that many of these are hardly more than sufficient to keep body and soul together. In the face of this condition, the hope of payment of taxes in cash by the majority of people must be forsaken. Penalty and higher interest, if enforced, could only result in a large amount of payment with property, property which the state could handle only at a sacrifice if the people affected would passively give it up.

As for the second course, that of cutting down expenditures, though some cuts have been made, it must be admitted that some desirable but unnecessary governmental agencies remain which could be further curtailed or eliminated entirely. But such a course would only add to the relief problem, and it is probable that the state would have to be expended in a less productive and less satisfactory way on the other hand.

It is unseemly for anyone to pretend to be all wise in the face of the conditions that exist. There are undoubtedly many minor adjustments that might be made to help keep the state on a sound and stable financial basis without working too great a hardship on a considerable number of people.

There may, for instance, be some of collecting more taxes than are being collected from people who have the means to pay. And there might still be some government economies effected. The judgment of the legislature after full debate may be relied on to bring this out. But if the conditions still demand, after these means are exhausted, Uncle Sam has broken the ground for another course, uncertain though it may be. Inasmuch as the state is powerless to issue more money or to raise the prices of the products of its people, it may attack the exigency by adopting an extraordinary budget for rehabilitation measures. In this manner the ordinary budget could be relieved, possibly, to a point where it could be balanced.

The Greatest Tribute

A few minutes later Jesus returned to the garden to find the disciples sleeping. Even so short a vigil had proved too heavy for their feebleness. In the hour of his great need there was no help from them. Again he went away, his spirit torn with agony. He was young, thirty-three; he did not want to die. He cried out to God that the cup might pass from his lips; that he might have time to sweep away the charges of blasphemy and evil which his enemies had heaped upon him. So he prayed, and coming back, found them again asleep.

This time he did not disturb them. The high tide of his revolt had subsided; the courage which had never deserted him throughout the three years cleared his soul, steadied his muscles.

"If it be not thy will that this cup pass from me," he prayed again, "then, Father, thy will be done."

It was the victory chant after the battle. With the calm peace of the conqueror he could make ready for the end. He had not long to wait. The soldiers were already at the entrance of the garden. He waited, until the armed men stumbled into his presence and then, rising, stood before them.

"Whom seek ye?" he demanded. Startled, awed, they could only mumble his name. "Jesus of Nazareth."

"I am he," he answered proudly. They had expected angry denunciation. But such calm, such dignity beyond the boundaries of their experience. Involuntarily they gave way and, rough veterans as they were, some of them "fell to the ground." It was a supreme tribute.

Then, Jesus, thought rebounding to those who had shared his triumphs and his sacrifices through the years, "If therefore ye seek me, let these others go their way."

But he had no need to think of the disciples' safety. Already they had made their swift escape—the last of the deserters—First his home town, then his best friend, then his relatives, then the crowd, finally the eleven.

He was left to face his faith alone. On a barren hill beyond the city walls they nailed his perfect body to the cross. Two robbers were crucified with him.

It was over. And yet— "Jesus." It was the voice of one of the robbers. "Jesus," he says painfully, "remember me, when thou comest into thy kingdom!"

Read that, oh men, and bow your heads. There have been leaders who could call forth enthusiasm when their fortunes ran high. But Jesus, when his enemies had done their worst, so bore himself that a crucified felon looked into his dying eyes and saluted him as king.

EAR TROUBLES Being deaf, or even partially so, is nothing less than a real misfortune. To not be able to hear perfectly is a real deprivation. To miss those soft, sweet chords in the music—to be shut out from that wood-bird song—the whippoorwill, the Bob-White! I recall when squirrel-hunting—I could plainly hear my gamey-tid-bit, gnawing into the hickory-nuts, as I moved slyly about in the forest, rifle at "ready."

A first symptom of impaired hearing is ringing noises in the ears. It may occur so gradually that the victim does not notice the slight buzzing that is aggravated by "taking cold." It may then be described as a "roaring!" Granted that one has not a cold, or any other recognizable infection, and yet his ears ring—few adults or those past middle age are totally free from it.

This symptom may persist for years, and not cause the patient to seek relief. It is a little affair, but one that gently repays a little intelligent investigation.

Remember, ringing in the ears usually has its origin in the ear-drum—the part you can reach with the awful "ear-spoon," or head of a pin, or match—or any other unwise thing! The ear-drum, bear in mind. It is being interfered with, and sounds its warning. What to do? Well—see that there is no undue accumulation of material in the ear. Wash out gently with syringe and comfortably warm water—do it very gently and yet thoroughly—once a day. Keep the external canal clean—free from wax.

practice is to get Oil of Mullen, and put a few drops in the ear once or twice a day. This is a vegetable oil, that seems to work well. See your doctor.
