"I bought a MAYTAG to save money. Now I couldn't keep house without it"

How many thousands of women have said that very thing? Of course you save money doing your laundry the Maytag way. But until you own a Maytag you can't realize the convenience—the deep satisfaction—of having that dependable washer always handy to launder one garment or a tubful in less time than it takes to wrap up a bundle and make a phone call. See the Maytag. Learn why it is faster, more thorough, easier on clothes, more economical to operate. Then learn what a small down payment will place one in your home.

The FAMILY DOCTOR JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

OUR BLACK CLOUD—SUICIDE

We family doctors "view with alarm" even more frequently than our crooked politicians do. How we wish we could drive the blackest of clouds away! Which is none other than self-destruction.

I can think of no greater offense to society than suicide. If we care nothing more for ourselves, then there are always some who care for us—we have no love to shock these dear ones who live us. I have seen a sorrowing mother bend over the bier of a son who died by his own hand! I hope I never may again. Leaving out all technicalities, it is plain WEAKNESS that submits to the weapon of self-destruction. I had almost said—insanity. In fact, I believe no sane person will commit suicide, though I cannot prove it here. The inability to stand pressure—to overcome,—what a colossal weakness!

Dissipation and wasting bodily energy over unprofitable things produces such weakness. Normal life and living never does. Especially does sexual extravagance, with indulgence of other harmful appetites lead to collapse of everything good. Living too fast brings one to the end of the road sooner—the wise man is a good brakeman.

"Tired of life" is the usual excuse. Remember, life is just what we make it. This world and its appointments are perfectly set for the dwelling place of man; it could not have been made better. It is almost a paradise. It is humanity that goes wrong, and "the wage of sin is death." What sane individual can take his own life?

This is a case where there is no cure; our only fight is for prevention—our only chance for good. This prevention is told in two simple words: "Right living." It is rotten wood that gives way when the house falls. Remember that, and shun evil as you would the deadliest serpent!

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Vaughn and Miss Ona Gilliam spent Thanksgiving at Portland, returning home Sunday evening.

Sauerkraut Good Food, But Raw Cabbage Better

As the food value of raw cabbage exceeds that of sauerkraut, as much cabbage as possible may well be stored to be eaten raw. Kraut making is an economy measure, however, in preserving cracked or otherwise imperfect heads or other cabbage that will not keep, says the home economics extension service at O. S. C. In spite of the loss of about half of the vitamin C in processing, sauerkraut is still a good food.

To make sauerkraut select mature sound heads. Wash and remove outside leaves. Shred finely. Pack in a clean crock or keg in layers about three inches deep. Sprinkle evenly with salt, using from 2 1/2 to 3 pounds of salt to 100 pounds of cabbage. If desired the salt may be mixed with the cabbage before packing. The distribution of two ounces of salt with every five pounds of cabbage is recommended.

Pack moderately tight and place a weighted board on the surface. The brine which forms should rise above the board. Cover the container and allow it to stand in a warm room to ferment. When the bubbling stops (in from one to eight weeks), remove container to a cool place. Seal the surface between board and sides of the crock or keg with a heavy layer of paraffin or by some other method. The collection of scum destroys the acid and causes spoilage. Sauerkraut may be canned after fermentation has ceased, by processing by the hot pack method one-half out in hot water bath.

A mimeographed publication HE 436 "Sauerkraut" can be obtained free of charge from any county extension agent or by writing the home economics extension office, Corvallis, Oregon.
