KIDS GET SOUSED SAME AS BEFORE!

Capital-Press, Salem.

AND now the Capital Journal is helping because people of all ages and both sexes are getting drunk and raising hell since we have taken on "light wines and beer." That paper asserted that intemperance would practically cease if we would repeal prohibition and allow the perfect ladies and gentlemen who were violating the law to have light wines and beer.

The CJ declared that drinking by boys and girls was caused entirely by prohibition, and that if the law was repealed they would immediately be satisfied to play ping-pong and make popcorn balls. But now the boys and girls are getting soured more completely and more frequently than ever before and the CJ rancidly demands that officers cease "permitted operators of so-called beer gardens and the like to cater to and prey upon boys and girls."

A LESSON IN BUTTER.

THE latest attempt of the government to peg the price of a great commodity has gone the way of the efforts to maintain the price of wheat and cotton and has ended in failure, according to many economists who study the dairying industry of Oregon.

A great many dairy farmers now lay the blame for the present condition to the fact that the government went into the butter business. Thru a Dairy Marketing commission at Washington, the government supplied funds to buy 75,000,000 pounds of butter.

put into effect early in 1934. This was back in the early fall. The effect was tremendous from the psychological standpoint. Farmers, encouraged in the belief that the government would furnish them a high price for their butterfat, commenced milking every available cow and sending every available pound of the product to the market.

Prices did remain firm for awhile under the famous pegging system, and then the bubble burst. So much butter came on to the market from so many different sources that the price shriveled. Down it went until by the middle of December it had reached the lowest figure in thirty-five years.

So much butter was manufactured under the stimulus of government price pegging that on December 1, according to official figures, stocks of butter on hand were more than 138,000,000 pounds, comparing with a stock of less than 38,000,000 on December 1, 1932, a gain of more than 100,000,000 pounds.

Butter-makers say that the unemployed cannot possibly consume the government's stock of butter, 60,000,000 pounds, by the first of May, the time when production will be on in full blast again. But the government experts say that the unemployed can and will do it.

Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale names a list of eighteen men who, he says are the only experts who understand the real meaning of money. Well, we may not understand its real meaning but we certainly would know what to do with it if we could get hold of some.

City Officials Hold Meet and Discuss Problems

Eugene.—Legislation for liquor control, federal aid civic work, city planning and a wide variety of topics were taken up at the third regional meeting of the League of Oregon Cities, held recently in Medford.

Representatives of cities were practically unanimous in their opinion that projects under the Civil Works Administration should be continued, as a means of relieving unemployment. Favorable attention was also given to the request of Marshall N. Dana, regional advisor for the Public Works Administration, that the principal communities of Oregon establish a city planning commission which will have for its purpose the securing of maximum benefits from public works projects.

THIRTY COUNTIES NOW HAVE AGENTS

State Conference of Agricultural Staff Members Shows Work For Farm Benefits.

More counties in Oregon than ever before will have the services of county agents this year, reports F. L. Ballard, county agent leader, following completion of county budgets throughout the state.

Partly because of the responsibility placed on the agricultural staff of the Oregon State college in bringing to Oregon the benefits under the various federal efforts in behalf of agriculture, the complete staff of the extension service, experiment stations and instructional division is holding a state wide conference at Corvallis this week.

Two Oregon Dairy Meets Scheduled for February

The annual convention of the Oregon Dairymen's association has been announced for La Grande for February 16 and 17, and the annual convention and short course of the Oregon Butter and Ice Cream Makers' association at Oregon State college February 19 to 22, by the officers of these two major dairy groups of the state.

President George Fullenwider of the Dairymen's association is preparing for an up-to-date program for the producers which will bring them the latest developments in the prospective AAA program for dairy production control. Other features will also be included on the program, including addresses by some nationally known men that are being obtained for the meeting.

Butter and ice cream makers of the state never fail to turn out in large numbers for their combined business and educational meeting at the college. This year President F. F. Moser of Corvallis is promising a convention program second to none in the past. Featured among the speakers is Dr. B. W. Hammer, dairy bacteriologist at Iowa State college.

Oregon Women to Learn Home Crafts by Radio

To help Oregon homemakers overcome some of the handicaps of the depression by "creating beauty radio broadcasts under that title with home crafts," a series of 13 has been arranged by KOAC, the state-owned station on the state college campus at Corvallis. The program is being broadcast each Friday afternoon starting at 3 o'clock. At least part of them will be re-broadcast simultaneously by KBPS, the Benson high school station in Portland.

The series of lectures will be given by Cecile McAllister, experienced home craft worker and former instructor in the Portland Extension center. Supplementary material is supplied weekly without charge to all who enroll in the course by sending their names to KOAC. The course includes such practical arts as preparing wool for home use, gathering native dyes from the Oregon woods, how to make beautiful hooked or braided rugs from scraps; knitting, crocheting and stitching; and even several lessons on possibilities in weaving.

Commercial Canners to Attend O. S. C. Classes

Men interested in commercial canning, whether beginners or old timers at the business, are being provided for in plans just announced for the thirteenth annual canners' school offered by the division of horticultural products at Oregon State college February 5 to 17. This short course is distinctively an Oregon institution and draws students each year from other states and even foreign lands.

This year the training course in handling canning machines will be held each afternoon right through the entire course. Forenoons for the first week will be devoted to fundamental work especially for beginners or those engaged in community canning operations, though much of interest to professionals will be included. The forenoons of the second week will be devoted to more advanced work in canning with opportunity provided for additional conferences with other members of the college staff on any related subjects.

NAMED ON HONOR ROLL

University of Oregon, Eugene, Jan. 10.—Dessa Hoffstetter, University of Oregon student from Heppner, has been named on the university honor roll, it was announced today by Dr. Earl M. Pallett, registrar and executive secretary.

To be named on the university honor roll, students must earn a grade average of 2.50, the computation being made on an essential basis of 12 hours or more of studies. In the averaging of grades a rating of 3 points is given for the highest grade "A", 2 for "B", 1 for "C", no points for "D" and minus 1 for failures. For the last term 90 students, 33 from Portland, 22 from Eugene, and 35 from various other cities of Oregon and other states were placed on the honor roll. The entire enrollment at the university at the time of computation was 2300, which makes the ratio of students gaining the honor roll distinction approximately 4 in 100.
