Oregon Papers Printing Much Public School News

Oregon weekly and daily newspapers carried an average of 26 column inches, or more than a full column, of public school news in each issue over a period of a month. It was revealed in a recent survey made by students in a class in public information methods conducted by C. J. McIntosh, professor of industrial editing at Oregon State college.

Four issues each of 75 representative newspapers of the state were clipped during one month and the results tabulated, classified and compared with a similar survey made at Columbia university, New York. Subjects given the most space in the two sections of the country tallied fairly closely, with extra-curricular activities such as sports, dramatics, musical events and the like leading with 47 percent in the east and 59 percent in Oregon.

Next in order in this state were P-T A activities and management and finance, while in the east news of teachers and school officers was second with P-T A activities third. The Columbia survey also included the order of preference as to school news as expressed by parents in a questionnaire circulated widely.

Replies from parents indicated they were interested first in news of pupils' progress and achievement, second in methods of instruction and third in news of pupils' health, while extra-curricular activity news was placed in thirteenth or last place.

"It is not at all certain that parents mean precisely what they think they mean about the kind of news they want," says Professor McIntosh in commenting on the results of the two surveys. "Naturally they are interested in progress and achievement, particularly of their own children, but the element of the unusual is essential to news, which is found most largely in sports, plays and other so-called frills theoretically frowned upon but widely read."

"Beyond this, however, editors are faced with running what they can get or none at all, and to the extent school organizations will make it possible for the papers to get well prepared news on other school activities apparently desired by parents, the editors will doubtless be most happy to run it."

Weather conditions in this part of Oregon are very unusual this winter. The weather is always a subject for discussion, but in the memory of the oldest inhabitants hereabouts, there has never been a winter to equal this one for mildness. Up to date but very few frosts days and nights, very little fog, and yet plenty of moisture in the shape of rain. Mild winters we have had, of course, but there have been drops in the temperature and for a week or two or three at a time the ground was frozen, and there would likely be some snow, this to be followed by a mild January and a sunny February. Just what the next few weeks will develop we will not attempt to say, and shall not borrow trouble over it, yet there is time for a lot of bad weather and severe freezes have visited us in both February and March in the years of the past. May we hope that the unusual conditions of fine weather will continue and that there will be nothing to cause us to weep later on.

NATION GIVES BIRTHDAY GIFT TO PRESIDENT, AN ENDOWMENT TO WARM SPRINGS FOUNDATION

"More than 300,000 people in America... are partly or wholly crippled. About half of this number are victims of infantile paralysis. Most of them could be greatly benefited if adequate facilities existed." From a statement by President Roosevelt.

A birthday ball in every community in the United States in honor of President Roosevelt on his 52nd anniversary on January 30 was planned by a committee of national leaders headed by Colonel Henry L. Doherty. The proceeds go to an endowment for the nation-wide work of the Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, the presidency of which was the only outside interest retained by Mr. Roosevelt when he entered the White House. Upper picture, a group of child patients at Warm Springs; lower left, President Roosevelt dining with child patients at Warm Springs; right, one of the many child victims of infantile paralysis who are regaining the use of their limbs at Warm Springs. Among nearly 100 leaders on the national committee were General Pershing, Cardinal Hayes, William Green, Owen D. Young, Will Rogers, Will H. Hays and Edsel Ford.

O.S.C. Laboratories to Aid Bonneville Builders Corvallis—Use of engineering laboratories at Oregon State college for determining final design of certain construction of the Bonneville dam has been arranged between the army engineers in charge and the institution. Research in design of draft tubes and outlet passages of hydro-electric installations carried on by C. A. Moore, head of the civil engineering department, attracted the attention of the government engineers, leading to the arrangement. Design of these parts of a power plant installation is not yet an exact science, staff members of the engineering school explain, hence the plan is to construct transparent models in the laboratory here and view the actual action of the water when passing through them. Changes will be made until the most suitable design is reached. DON'T MISS THIS. 10 a. m., Feb. 7th, 1934, at the Star theater, Heppner, Ore., pictures with sound showing late models of J. I.
