WHOSE RIVER IS IT?

T IS TIME for the people of the Inland Empire to wake up to their interests in obtaining the benefits of the Columbia river to which they are entitled. A bunch of pol-iticians, one of whom has announced himself for the governorship of Oregon, obtained authorization for a big power project dam at Bonneville, the bentfits, if any, of which would largely accrue to Portland. To get their power plant, the poli-ticians would stick a $31,000,000 plug in the Columbia and head off for all time any competition from the river to Portland shipping interests and at the same time deny the people of the interior their one great facility for a chance to compete in the marts of the world.

The Bonneville dam as at present proposed is nothing more than a stopper, because the projected locks for navigation would accommodate no more shipping than is at present accommodated by the locks at Cascade Locks and the Celilo canal. Whereas, by the expenditure of little, if any, more money, locks of sufficient depth could be installed to pass ocean-going vessels, and thus bring the seaboard a hundred miles farther into the interior. There is no sound refutation of fact, either by the engineers the AAA and the FCA does not who drew the plans or by the interests who apparently dictated the specifications

Plenty of facts and figures have been given since time immemorial to show that regions with water-shipping facilities are favored in the marketing of their products be-cause of the lower transportation cost on water. Bringing the Co lumbia seaboard a hundred miles La Grande Program Set farther inland would mean immense savings on the freight bills paid by interior shippers, a saving that in the future may mean the difference between profit and loss or the margin by which the very existence of the farming and industrial activity of the Inland Empire Dairymen's association at may be justified and encouraged. acrued savings over a short period of time would justify a very large expenditure for deeper locks at Bonneville, should a very large much emphasis on economic and governmental affairs this year.
