BLIND ECONOMICS.

NOW comes word from Washington that under NRA establishments who advertise their wares will not be permitted to sell as cheaply as those who do not advertise. Coincidentally, a bill has been proposed in congress which would do away with all trade names on commodities offered for sale and substitute therefore government grade numbers. In these and other ways is a widespread attempt being made to brand advertising an un-economic service.

It is hard to tell just what is behind the movement, but it leads one to believe some tall "chislers" are at work. One naturally suspects in the light of the impressive array of brains President Roosevelt has gathered about him, that the instigators know the merit of advertising. The movement smacks of a scheme to rob individual business of its very arms and leave it as a prey to the wolves of government bureaucracy to feast on at their pleasure.

To be consistent in their policy, the opponents of advertising, if successful, would force all commercial goods behind blank opaque walls of storehouses under lock and key so that none might know the contents thereof, and prohibit anyone from giving indication in any way about the contents; for to expose merchandise in any way, or to speak of it in any way, is advertising.

Perhaps the non-advertising proponents are attempting to gouge, or to muzzle newspapers by depriving them of their life blood. But newspapers are only one of many media for advertising. That they have been established as the best medium cannot be gainsaid, for they afford unlimited space for presenting the advertiser's message in a timely, readable manner, to be read at the reader's leisure without any time or space restrictions. No other advertising media can give as much service at so little cost to both the advertiser and the people to whom it is directed. No other media offering a like amount of service reaches so many people at so low a cost.

But if the proponents believe their attack will affect newspapers alone, they are bound for disillusionment in a big way. Right off the bat radio broadcasting would be paralyzed. With advertising, its sole means of support, gone, it would have to be subsidized by the government with a tax levied on receiving sets to support it, or broadcasting and the whole radio industry would be killed. Printing and advertising novelty establishments would be put out of business wholesale. The sign painter would be relegated to the limbo of the past. The mention of any commodity or the name of any man connected with the business world would be eliminated from the silver screen. Storekeepers would be forced to stand in front of their blank (with the possible exception of a government establishment) establishment, wearing plain clothes and to deliver all commodities in plain, numbered packages. . . . But why go further?

Such an idea coming from an administration whose very existence was made possible by far-flung publicity (advertising in its worst form) is but to laugh. Whoever would have heard of the Blue Eagle, the New Deal, or President Roosevelt himself, but for advertising? And now they say it doesn't pay to advertise.

HARDMAN

By LUCILLE FARRINS
Mr. and Mrs. Chester Saling came over from Prairie City Thursday and spent a few days renewing old time acquaintances. Friday night they were guests of Mrs. Geo. Kirk.
Loes Adams, who is taking a course of treatments for spinal trouble, spent a week at her home here. Loes' condition is improved at this writing.
Mrs. Walter Scott (Miss Mary Saling) was given a community wedding shower at the home of her sister, Mrs. Hubert MacDonald last Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Scott received many lovely gifts. Annual Outlook Report For Spring Crops Issued

Continuance of the present upward trend in the general level of food prices will tend to strengthen farm markets, but the situation nevertheless does not justify increased production of most crops, says the annual outlook for spring sown crops and vegetables just released by the Oregon Agricultural Extension Service. The report covers wheat, feed grains, hay, flaxseed, beans, clover seed, hops, potatoes, vegetables and melons, and other commodity outlook notes.

The outlook for clover seed appears to be much improved over a year ago, owing to small stocks on hand and an increased demand for planting on acreage which has been taken out of other crops, the report states.

The situation needs watching with respect to hops and onions especially, with the market outlook for wheat, feed grain, potatoes and beans not too good. The outlook for flaxseed, corn and berries was said to be fair, with the poultry and sheep industries getting along better than dairy, beef cattle and hogs.

The report contains Oregon farm price indexes for the major farm commodities by years since 1910. In percentage of the 1929-1930 average the farm price of eggs in Oregon on January 15 was 55, butterfat 36, beef cattle 37, hogs 36, lambs 49, wool 81, wheat 53, 62, barley 54, hay 77 and potatoes 56.

With the index of prices paid by farmers at 116 per cent of pre-war and the general average of prices received at 70, farm purchasing power was 80 per cent of pre-war in January compared to 50 a year ago, says the circular. The purchasing power of eggs was 55 per cent of parity, butterfat 53, beef cattle 55, hogs 37, lambs 51, wool 119, horses 44, wheat 68, potatoes 95 and apples 89. A copy of the complete report may be obtained from any county agricultural agent.

The purpose of printing information from contracting producers' statements is to give all producers an opportunity to check with the community committees any statements believed to be inaccurate.

The butter and ice cream makers elected Ralph W. Waggoner, Clatskanie, president; Percy Murray, Klamath Falls, vice-president; Ed Conley, Portland, treasurer, and Dr. G. H. Wilster, Oregon State college, secretary.

La Grande—Twenty acres of Ladak alfalfa grown in rows for seed last year brought Bernal D. Hug of Elgin a gross total of more than $1000, according to a report made by Mr. Hug to County Agent H. G. Avery. Mr. Hug has sold his entire lot of seed.

Oregon Groups Agree on Dairy Control Program

Oregon's two largest dairy associations are on record as favoring a single list of suggestions for the forthcoming dairy production and control program under the AAA as the result of endorsement by the Oregon Butter and Ice Cream Makers association of the eight-point program adopted by the Oregon Dairymen's association.

Decision on Contracts Needed Soon; County Papers to Publish Data Lists.

The manufacturers in their annual convention and short course at Oregon State college agreed with the producers that they welcomed Secretary Wallace's proposal for a 15 per cent reduction in butterfat production, but that some points are essential for inclusion in such a program. Much condensed, these eight points are as follows:

1. An embargo on imported fats and oils from outside the continental United States.

2. Prevention of importation of meats and hides.

3. Reduction of 15 per cent in oleomargarine manufacture and an equal compensating tax on oleo to match the reduction and tax on butterfat.

4. Federal backing of immediate elimination of tuberculous cows.

5. Permission to divert a small fraction of Oregon benefit payments to Oregon Dairy Council to promote greater use of dairy products.

6. A program for allowing reduction in 100-per-cent-good herds by placing good cows in herds where poor or diseased cows are eliminated.

7. Clear and concise wording of contracts.

8. Prevention of a rush of dairy animals to the beef markets.

These suggestions, in a more amplified form and with explanations included, have been forwarded to Washington and to other groups interested in the dairy program.

The dairymen's convention at La Grande re-elected George Fullenwider, Carlton, as president; A. E. Engbretson, Astoria, and Byron DeYoung, Gresham, vice-presidents, and Roger Morse, Corvallis, secretary-treasurer.

The butter and ice cream makers elected Ralph W. Waggoner, Clatskanie, president; Percy Murray, Klamath Falls, vice-president; Ed Conley, Portland, treasurer, and Dr. G. H. Wilster, Oregon State college, secretary.
