Schoenfeld to be Head of Big Portland Dairy Meet

Dairymen of the Pacific northwest are looking forward to the regional dairy conference in Portland April 9 and 10 as probably the most important in the recent history of the industry.

William A. Schoenfeld, dean of agriculture at Oregon State college, has been named chairman of the regional conference by Chester C. Davis, administrator of the farm act. Dean Schoenfeld announces that the meeting will be at the Multnomah hotel starting at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Delegations will be present from Oregon, Washington and northern Idaho. Three or four specialists from the AAA organization in Washington will be present at the meeting, possibly including Roger Morse, extension dairyman for Oregon, who was loaned to the Washington authorities to assist in working out the program.

A request that his leave be extended another 90 days or until the dairy program is actively in the field was recently granted by the O. S. C. authorities.

The national dairy industry faces a milk production which increased by two billion pounds from 1920 to 1932; a cow population more than 26 million larger than it has ever been before; an average price index of 69 compared with 140 in 1925, and total cash income just about half the 1929 level.

Means of alleviating this condition will be the basis of the discussion at the Portland meeting.

Jefferson County to Use Crop Insurance Feature Jefferson county wheat farmers will have opportunity to realize on the crop insurance feature of their wheat allotment contracts as the result of recent acceptance of that county as an area where planting of wheat this year would in many instances be of no benefit.

Drought over that area last fall made planting impractical in most instances, and this dry weather continued this spring.

The wheat contracts obligate the grower to plant at least 54 percent of his base acreage to qualify for full benefit payments unless the grower is located in an area recognized by the wheat administration as unfit for planting by reason of drought, floods, storms or other "act of God."

After careful inspection of conditions and on the plea of Jefferson county residents, Paul V. Marion, director of extension, recommended that Jefferson county be so designated. Approval of the recommendation has just been received from Washington.

This does not mean that all growers in the county as a whole will automatically be relieved of the necessity of making the 54 percent planting. Each individual grower must make application for exemption through his allotment committee.

In case a grower's application is approved by the committee and at Washington, he will receive his full benefit payments just as though he had produced a crop.

It is pointed out that any grower with reasonable chances for a crop will probably make more by planting, but the ruling does avoid the waste of having seed thrown away in meeting technical requirements when there is no possibility of a crop. Trained specialists who have examined the region found that the soil was so dry near the surface as to preclude adequate germination, and that the deeper soil moisture is too meager to make a crop if it did come up.
