SPRING, AND CLEAN-UP TIME.

TE, IN the Gazette Times office, will be glad, yea, very glad, when spring clean-up time is over. We can sympathize with the housewife if she becomes a bit petulent at complaints of hubby and the kids about meals not being just right when she has the house topsy-tur-vy at clean-up time. Those drop-ping in at the Gazette Times office this week were no doubt at first impressed that the place had been hit by a tornado, until their nostrils were attacked by the keen stench of fresh paint and they saw Frank Roberts perched on a step ladder, wielding a mean brush. Mr. Roberts, the landlord, is giving the old shop a good working over, and there is alreay evidence that the spring sunlight will henceforth reflect a brighter interior—but will it ever be possible to obliterate all those paint splotches?

The experience is a bit trying, but no doubt the stray drippings of the paint brush will be eventually put to rout; a great amount of miscellaneous litter will have been dis posed of, withal, and when the shop is once more in order, certainly the disagreeableness of a week or two will be repaid in the following months of lying in a brighter, cleaner home.

It takes a bit of philosophy to carry the tender nature through all the grime and cobwebs of the spring clean-up. When one looks at the paint bespattered stove, it is well to think, "anyway, we're lucky it's not a grand piano," or if a tear rops from the brush through the gap of the shirt collar, one might opine that "maybe a bath before Saturday night won't do any harm, now that the weather has warmed up a bit."

But since the clean-up bug bit Mr. Roberts, we wondered if we couldn't "sic" the little insect onto a lot of other folks, starting an epidemic of bites. Misery loves company, you know. But we're not alone in the desire. The city dads have ordered a general clean-up day next Monday. It's not the grime and cobwebs within, but the trash litters without the homes of the city that have their concern And to facilitate the cleaning they are providing free transportation the city dump grounds.

No, it's not a new idea, the idea that spring is clean-up time. Fact is, that's just the natural order. two, and maybe ache a bit at the joints, don't we always feel a lot better after things have been tidied up again?

ANSWERS GILL ATTACK. To the Editor

Under the heading "A discussion of the Sales Tax Bill," last Saturday afternoon at Cecil, the Pomons grange heads saw to it that there was no rebuttal by the affirmative speaker. Thus Mr. Gill was per mitted to refute all that he could of the affirmative argument and make several vicious remarks con cerning the 1933 legislature of Oregon. This is the second time that the writer has heard these remarks made before a gathering of citizens of this county, and never having an opportunity to refute them, takes this method to let the people of Morrow county know the facts surrounding the passage of the sales

In this statement, I do not at tempt to make an argument for the sales tax, but rather to defend one of Oregon's departments of government, the legislature. Mr. Gill stated that there was "Wall Street Lobby" in Salem dur-ing the last special session of the legislature, to put over the sales tax bill. I do not accuse Mr. Gill of dishonesty, but I do believe, that in this case he is 100% mistaken. There were meetings of the legislators, perhaps 30 or 40 of them at a time at various places to discuss the sales tax, but at no time was anyone else present. The measure was given very earnest consideraby every member, but this writer was never approached by any lobbyist at any time concern-ing the sales tax. True we did receive many letters and telegram from our own districts, but if Wall Street had any interest in Oregon's sales tax, it certainly was never made manifest to me.

Mr. Gill laments the fact that the legislature passed another sales tax when the former had been voted down such a short time before. The legislature was composed of men and women, who, on the average are every bit the equal of Mr. Gill both mentally and morally. They were looking toward a plan of equal taxation and good government, and it seems strange, as Mr. Gill con-tends, that so many of them were wrong and so few right. The real fact is that the members of the leg-islature believed that the people generally did not know the need of sales tax nor did they know the provisions of the tax because they were prevented from knowing by the constant appeal to prejudice swap them off, but to put them to that was always before them. The work, instead of having them standsales tax had been pictured as a ing around with their hands in
