Official Paper for Morrow County

EACH CAN DO HIS BIT.

NOT so long ago a Morrow pioneer, now retired and living elsewhere, came back for a visit. In the old days he was one of the leaders of the Socialist party. It was somewhat surprising to hear him loudly lauding the "New Deal."

True socialism is pointed to by teachers of political science as the Utopian state. It is possible only when everyone puts into the pot exactly in proportion as he takes from it. For everyone to share equal benefits, everyone would have to contribute in like amount.

The Good Book admonishes man not to bury his talents. And a good government should see that proper application of talents is adequately rewarded. The duty on either hand is clear. There should be no wasting of talents by anyone, and there should be no encouragement by the government for anyone to waste his talents.

The New Deal has been paternalistic, and laudably so in that it has given many people sustenance through a period when application of their talents was not properly rewarded. But New Dealers have no intention of fostering government paternalism. It will be ever harder and harder for those who have talents and who fail to use them to obtain help from the government.

THAT'S GOLD IN THEM THAR HILLS.

If you don't believe it, hop in the car some Sunday morning and an hour's drive will place you back where gold may be seen in every hand. Though not the much coveted metal, it is equally beautiful. The blossoms of arnica, sunflower and balsam root predominate. If you are not interested in the yellows, perhaps we could please you with some of the hundreds of shades and hues of blues and reds. Delicate lilies, peas and vetches are now all in bloom. Indian paint brushes daub the reds and oranges with a free and lavish hand. A few days back the grass widows were all out in their Sunday best and greeted everybody with that knowing smile. However, disappointed at the lack of attention they have gone back for their annual year-long nap.

All roads have been cleaned of logs and are now passable. Fair to good fishing can be found on Potamus, Ditch creek and Wall creek. Deer are plentiful and can often be seen along the road sides. Occasionally one gets to observe a ponderous elk crashing along his way through the underbrush. I would say the main points of interest for a trip would be to:

Opal Mountain to see the old opal mines. Many beautiful specimens can be found.

Tamarack tower to see the new steel tower and look over the surrounding country. The tower is not guyed but counterbalanced by nearly sixty tons of concrete in the base.

Camas Prairie to see the old fortifications in the vicinity. History unknown.

Wall creek to see the natural beauties of the canyon and for the fishing.

Potamus creek for scenic beauty and good fishing; Wineand canyon to see the only natural lake or pond in the mountains; Pat Shea mine, undoubtedly the work of some prehistoric people; Kahler basin for fossils, especially fossilized wood, thought to be sequoia or red wood. Willow creek to see the artesian well and the coal fields. Ditch creek meadows for golf and recreation such as camping, fishing and berrying in season. There is a distinct cleavage in timber types between the eastern and western halves of the district. East for lodge pole and west for ponderosa pine.

All-Day Meeting

On next Sunday, May 20th, the Heppner Church of Christ will hold a most interesting all-day meeting, under the leadership of State Secretary C. P. Swander of Portland. Brother Swander will bring the message at the eleven o'clock hour of worship, and at twelve o'clock there will be a basket dinner in the dining rooms of the Church. The Church will furnish coffee, cream and sugar, and those attending are privileged to bring their baskets and spread their dinner on the dining room tables.

At two o'clock Brother Swander will speak again and lead in a Conference on Religious Education which will be worth while for all who will attend. Special music is in preparation for these services. It is expected that there will be groups in attendance from all over Morrow county, especially for the afternoon meeting which will conclude in time for those present from a distance to reach their homes in good season.

The afternoon meeting will conclude the meetings of the day, and at eight o'clock the baccalaureate sermon for the Heppner high school class of '34 will be delivered in the high school auditorium by Joel R. Benton.

You are invited to come and fellowship with us in this day of spiritual and material good things.

County Agents in Oregon Experience Busiest Year

Oregon county agents put in the busiest year in history during 1933 when emergency work was added to their regular projects, according to the annual report just submitted by F. L. Ballard, state county agent leader. The number of office calls by farmers and others seeking specific assistance exceeded 100,000 for the year, a new high mark since the county agent service was established in 1913. Advent of the agricultural adjustment act and the other emergency relief programs gave the agents the added task of explaining the wheat adjustment program, the corn-hog plan, and assisting with seed loans, farm mortgage adjustment, and state and federal relief activities, Ballard points out.

Despite this added emergency work, marked progress was made during the year in the major regular projects. These included furthering the expansion of alfalfa acreage in the Willamette valley, seeking new disease resistant varieties of alfalfa in eastern Oregon, promoting the development of the small seed industry, and introducing improved varieties of forage crops and fruits.

Marketing assistance constituted an important part of the work in many counties, while additional help was given the 4-H club work in counties not employing regular club agents, Ballard's report shows. More county agents and assistants are now employed in Oregon than ever before, every county except Harney and Josephine either having an agent of its own or a cooperative agreement with a neighboring county for the service of a joint agent.

Automotive Equipment Given O S C Engineers

Corvallis—Closer contacts between the department of mechanical engineering at Oregon State college and the automotive industry of the state have resulted in more active cooperation between the educational and commercial phases of the industry. The Oregon section of the American Society of Automotive Engineers has just obtained a gift of more than $3000 worth of automotive equipment for use in the engineering laboratories at O. S. C.

H. W. Drake, chairman of the Oregon section, has also announced the future awarding of cups to undergraduates who write the best articles on automotive subjects. Members of the society plan to provide openings for Oregon State graduates whenever possible, said Drake.

Oregon Well Represented In Beef Councils of AAA

If or when a production control program for beef cattle is decided upon, Oregon will be well represented among those working out the details of such a plan, it is observed by men at Oregon State college who are following the progress of the AAA. Announcement was made following the preliminary beef conference at Chicago that Herman Oliver, president of the Oregon Cattle and Horse Raisers' association, will be a member of the advisory committee of 25 which will proceed to work out a plan of production adjustment for presentation to the industry.

Oregon is already represented on the technical staff of the beef section at Washington, D. C., by E. L. Potter, head of the division of agricultural economics at Oregon State college, and former head of the department of animal husbandry there. He is in Washington on leave from the college.

Chief action of the preliminary conference at Chicago late in April was to consider the critical surplus situation in the beef industry brought about by the constant increase in breeding stock in the face of declining consumption. It was determined by the conference that some control program is imperative. The appointment of an advisory committee of 25 of which Oliver is a member followed.

Weather conditions have been taking a hand in some of the other adjustment programs. Announcement was made recently that the wheat section of the AAA has designated 352 counties in 11 states where signers of contracts may exercise their own option as to planting the minimum of 54 per cent of former acreage or not planting any wheat at all. Planting conditions in much of the spring wheat belt were found to be so bad that seeding in many cases would be useless. Following that action conditions became even worse for a time at least, so what the final result will be remains to be seen. Only two counties in Oregon, Jefferson and Crook, were designated as optional planting areas. In such cases or where planting results only in crop failure, benefit payments on the allotment will be made the same as though a crop had been raised. In this respect the AAA plan operates as limited crop insurance.

Quality Dairy Products Goal of Oregon Industry

The state butter code, together with more stringent federal regulations, are combining to give the greatest impetus yet experienced to the movement for improved butter and cream quality in Oregon. Starting on the farm and continuing through to an increased use of dairy products by the ultimate consumer. This is the report of Dr. G. H.

Wilster, dairy manufacturing specialist at Oregon State college, who has been representing the dairy department in a cooperative statewide movement including also the state department of agriculture, the Oregon Dairy council and the Oregon Dairy Products Improvement association.

The butter code provides for the use of A, B, and C grades of butter, easily understandable by the purchaser. Reports from throughout the state are that the consumers are taking to the new markings well and are asking for the grade A products, or the B grade if they want a good edible butter of slightly lower quality at less cost. Creameries now must grade the cream in self protection in order to be able to put out more A grade butter and to keep from paying too much for cream that will make only B or C grade butter, it has been brought out. This in turn insures the producer being paid more for cream carefully produced and frequently delivered.

The state has now been organized to conduct scores of community meetings in every county where the situation may be explained and the cooperation of producers and creamerymen enlisted. Dr. Wilster has made a close study of the factors most responsible for low scoring cream from the producers' standpoint. Worst sources, he finds, are cows or the milk not kept clean, flies, unsterilized utensils, and milking machines or cream separators not properly cleaned.

A mimeographed circular on improvement in the quality of cream has been prepared by Dr. Wilster which may be had free. He reports that butter quality in Oregon has made a great advance in the past five years making possible expansion of out-of-state as well as local markets.
