The place of Mrs. Emma Ranck on Chase street was in the line of the recent flood, and the surroundings were somewhat wrecked. However, after getting things tidied up again, there is little actual damage; even her flower beds are looking just as flourishing, or even more so, than when laid low by the water and mud. It would appear now that but little real damage has been done to vegetation along the creek, and in many places there has been a fine deposit of silt that will be beneficial as a fertilizer.

The annual school election will be held at the school house next Monday afternoon. At this time due to the removal from Ione of one director and the resignation of another it will be necessary to elect three new directors. As far as we can learn no one is announcing his or her candidacy for election or reelection. At best it seems to be a race of those who "do not choose to run." Hard times always seem to call for considerable criticism of the administration of school affairs which does not make people deliberately hunt for positions where they feel they will be unduly criticized. In the case of the affairs of the local school district we feel that a very good financial showing has been made. Five years ago the district was $7500 in the hole and at present they have outstanding warrants to the amount of $4400 but to offset these they have on hand $7700 in warrants due them from other districts and the high school tuition fund.

ON OREGON FARMS

Lakeview—Crested wheat and Smooth Brome grass are apparently the only grasses to survive the past few years in most of the dry land forage nurseries in Lake county, according to V. W. Johnson, county agent, who recently made a check up on this matter. Crested wheat grass made an excellent growth on the Charles Crump ranch in South Warner valley where it was planted early in 1929 on a dry hillside, and the wind had spread the seed and new plants were coming.

Dallas—Evidence that the earwig parasites introduced into Dallas two years ago have been of material help in holding the pests in check was gathered by J. R. Beck, county agent, through a telephone survey of the various sections of the city recently. Early in May it looked as though there would be a heavy earwig infestation this year, Mr. Beck says, but in the words of one homemaker, "Something has happened to them." Others interviewed say that the earwigs are small and puny this year. Additional evidence that the parasites have been getting in their work is found in the fact that most of the calls for earwig control now come from rural women, while formerly they came from city homemakers. Mr. Beck points out.
