IDLE TALK.

(Editorial from "Wallace's Farmer")
IS EVERY good farmer betraying the principle of production control? Is a man who uses good seed, breeds good livestock, uses efficient farm machinery, gets his farm work done at the right time, and secures excellent results in crop yields and livestock production a traitor to the adjustment control program?
Some people pretend to think so. They say: "You're trying to cut down production, aren't you? Well, then, what do you mean by using good seed and purebred livestock? If you use poor seed, scrub stock and half-do you your farm work all around, you'll reduce production. But if you do a good job of farming, you're in danger of producing almost as much as usual. What do you mean by it?"

If these people really mean this, they should go on and say: "What you really ought to do is to farm like your great-grandfather or his great-grandfather." Plow with an iron pointed plow with a wooden mold-board; harrow with a bundle of branches; plant your corn with a dibble; harvest your small grain with a cradle; thresh it out with flails or oxen. Go back to razorback hogs and longhorn steers. Use wild cattle for a milking herd, and lasso a cow when you want to milk."
All this kind of talk is nonsense, of course. There is no conflict between efficiency and production control. Without production control, unregulated efficiency may hurt farmers thru the production of huge surpluses. With production control, efficiency means more money and less work for the farmer.

If aiding farmers to produce more efficiently is a betrayal of the adjustment program, then most corn belt farmers are traitors. The man who raises purebred hogs, the man who breeds for higher production in milk cows, the purebred beef man who tries to raise a blockier and easier-gaining cattle, the man who raises higher-yielding seed corn or oats or wheat or barley or a dozen other crops, are all traitors. So also is every farmer man who, out of his years of experience, gives practical hints to his younger neighbor on how to do his work easier and better.

It is true that before we had a program of production control, the growing efficiency of our good farmers was often a curse to farmers as a class, in that it caused the production of more livestock and more grain than the market wanted. Now, good farming is a benefit, not only to the individual who follows sound practices, but also to all farmers. If farm efficiency increased as much as 3 or 4 per cent in one year, it would be easy to plan for slightly less acreage the following year, and so balance production with demand.

Under production control, the efficient farmer works fewer hours and makes more money than the inefficient farmer. Without production control, they both worked long hours and both lost.

It is possible, of course, to reduce production by working longer hours than ever and using the tools and methods of our great-grandfathers. But who is fool enough to want to do it?

Government to Buy Cattle In Western Drouth Areas

Plans for extending the government program of cattle buying as a drouth relief measure already under way in Minnesota and South Dakota to all emergency drouth areas of the west were made by a conference of livestock men and agricultural college officials from 13 states which met in Denver recently to consider drouth relief measures.

All the states represented at Denver have some counties in which drouth conditions are as severe as in the districts in which the government is now buying cattle, said F. L. Ballard, Oregon county agent leader, who attended the conference. In order to reduce numbers of cattle in these areas in line with prospective feed supplies for the coming winter, liquidation beyond normal is necessary, and many farmers will undoubtedly sell to the government.

Prices paid by government buyers are determined by an appraisal committee or an inspector from the bureau of animal industry, and range up to $20 for cattle two years old or over. The animals are turned over to the Surplus Relief corporation where they are examined and those suitable for canning are sent to canneries. The canned meat is then turned over to relief agencies, none of it going on to the open market. Cattle too poor to stand shipment are killed on the ranch. Government cattle buying will be confined to emergency drouth areas, of which Oregon has two—Crook and Jefferson counties—until all the cattle offered in these districts are moved, and will then be extended to the secondary drouth areas, in which conditions are severe but where a real emergency does not exist at present. Three Oregon counties—Malheur, Harney and Wheeler—are now listed as secondary drouth areas. W. A. Schoenfeld, director of the Oregon experiment station, has been appointed drouth relief director for this state, and counties wishing to come within the provisions of the federal cattle buying program may make application to him through their county courts. The work of organizing and directing the sale of cattle in these areas will be carried on by the county agricultural agents.

A group of sheep men appeared at the Denver conference and asked that the government also begin a program of sheep purchasing as a feed conservation measure, but the matter was referred to Washington officials for consideration, Mr. Ballard reports.
The conference also recommended that a substantial sum of money be set aside by FERA officials for the development of springs, water holes and the sinking of wells on ranges of western states where there is considerable grass but no water, Mr. Ballard said. It was estimated that $100,000 could be used to advantage for this purpose in eastern Oregon.

"The sale of cattle to the government in Oregon will be in the nature of a culling process, because there is no place in the state where drouth conditions are so severe that whole herds must be sacrificed, as is the case in many states in the western plains area," said Mr. Ballard.

25 Pct. Penalty Imposed on Tax After July 31st

Portland, June 22.—J. W. Maloney, collector of internal revenue, stated today that he had completed mailing blanks to all persons who had paid special taxes as retail or wholesale liquor dealers, retail or wholesale dealer in fermented liquors, and retail or wholesale dealer in uncolored oleomargarine, in this state during the year ending June 30, 1934, to be used by them in returning tax for the year ending June 30, 1935.

He stated that these taxes are paid annually being due July 1, 1934. Each taxpayer is required to file his return of tax in the office of the collector of internal revenue, Portland, not later than July 31, 1934, with payment of the tax; if the tax return is not received until after that date, a penalty of 25 percent of the tax is incurred through delinquency.

"Blanks were sent out the latter part of May," stated Collector Maloney, "to all persons in this state who are registered under the Harrison Narcotic Act, to dispense or sell narcotics, to be used in re-registering for the year beginning July 1, 1934. The penalty of 25 percent imposed for delinquency is incurred if these registrations are received after July 1, 1934, and as the records of this office indicate that a large number of persons liable for registration under the Narcotic Law have failed to do so up to this time, I would urge them to file their registration forms immediately."

Dallas—Ralph Kester of Suver district—one of the few dairymen in his district who cuts his hay before putting it into the mow—believes this method just as cheap as pulling it in with a hay fork, he told County Agent J. R. Beck recently. Mr. Kester, like many other farmers of that section, has a fine hay crop that will tax the capacity of his barn, Mr. Beck says.
