Among Heppner folk who enjoyed seeing the Oregon-Washington football game in Portland Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Barratt, Harold Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Kimball, P. W. Mahoney, Miss Patricia Mahoney, Dr. J. H. McCrady, Miss Patricia Monahan, Mrs. Richard C. Lawrence, Roderick Thompson, Albert Massey, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Ferguson, Jasper Crawford, Mrs. Leonard Schwarz of Prineville, sister of Mrs. Ferguson and Mr. Crawford, accompanied the Fergusons who returned by way of the Wapinitia cut-off to drop her off at home.

Leslie Rasmussen laid in a nice supply of meat for the winter on Sunday, when he knocked over four of the hogs running wild in the country about the head of Skinner creek. According to reports about forty head of these animals reverted to nature some four years ago from the O'Connor brothers farm and since then have increased materially in numbers. It is said O'Connor brothers have opened the season on them.

E. E. Brodie, editor of Oregon City Enterprise and ex-minister to Spain and Finland, also a member of the state liquor control commission, was in Heppner Tuesday morning on official business. He dropped into the Gazette Times office for a fraternal call.

Chas. H. Bartholomew, Butler creek ranchman, was here Tuesday. Having a good carryover of hay from last season, Mr. Bartholomew will be well supplied with feed for his stock this winter. Frosty nights are prevailing out that way.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Hughes of McMinnville arrived in the city Friday to visit relatives and friends. Mr. Hughes, former Heppner boy and graduate of Heppner high school, is now proprietor of a drug store in the Yamhill county seat.

A party of four hunters all of whom were successful in bagging their buck this week were Albert Adkins, Ben Robertson, Roscoe Cox and Frank Stanley. They hunted the rims in the vicinity of Little Potamus creek.

E. E. Rugg reports a heavy frost at the home place at the mouth of McKinney creek Tuesday night. He would rather see some rain or snow right now as it would be better for crops and range.

Returning from a visit to Portland the end of the week, Harold Cohn was accompanied by Mrs. Cohn and baby daughter, who is being welcomed by the many friends of the family.

Bert Johnson was in the city Saturday, accompanied by his mother. Too much wind and dust to do any seeding out north of Ione over the week end, and the wind was cold, too.

Jason Biddle was in town Tuesday from the Rhea creek farm. He reports weather as taking on a little tinge of winter out that way, with pretty heavy frosts at night.

Mrs. Josie Jones who spent several days in Pendleton the past week, returned home on Sunday after enjoying a visit with relatives in the Round-Up city.

Strayed—Brown saddle horse; saddle marked, front feet scarred from wire cuts; about 1100 lbs. Was raised near Condon. Notify Ralph Corrigan, Echo, Ore. 1tp

A Horse Race Budget Increase

By A. L. LINDBECK

SALEM.—Discounting the political propaganda being put out by the several campaign headquarters in an effort to influence the wavering voters the gubernatorial contest, at this stage, just less than three weeks before election, can be said to have developed into a real horse race with the three leaders coming down the home stretch in a neck-and-neck finish.

While there is a lot of talk to be heard as to the gains made by the several candidates any unprejudiced analysis of the situation must take cognizance of the fact that the claims come from the partisans of the various camps and that the great mass of voters, whose ballots will decide the issue, are yet to be heard from.

Profiting by the strategy which brought about the eleventh hour "swing" to Dunne in the primary campaign and resulted in his nomination the republicans have been concentrating upon a "beat Zimmerman" drive, holding up their candidate as the one man who can turn the trick. The democrats, on their part, although admitting that

Rheumatic Pain Stopped by Lemon Juice Recipe

Martin suffered a slump from his high popularity of the early campaign now insist that the tide has again turned and is once more setting in toward the General. Zimmerman, except for an occasional random shot at both of the regular party nominees, continues to paddle his own canoe with an occasional helpful shove from such other well known "progressives" as Sam Brown and Willis Mahoney.

Unbiased political opinion is pretty well agreed that just at this juncture the three candidates will run a very close race in the out-state counties with victory going to the candidate who can come out of Multnomah county with a plurality. So evenly matched are the three principal contenders for the gubernatorial mantle that the decision hinges largely on the "breaks" that can be expected to develop in the final days of the campaign.

Senator Sam Brown's mystery speech is no longer a mystery. Whatever else may have been deduced from Brown's broadcast he made it quite clear that he is not supporting the republican candidate. Except to flay Dunne and his legislative record, however, the Gervais farmer did not endorse either of the other candidates and both Martin and Zimmerman find a deal of encouragement that the speech cost Dunne thousands of votes. Strange as it may seem Dunne also finds a mead of encouragement in the Brown tirade. Republican newspapers generally interpret the speech as a case of "sour grapes" and insist that it will react to Dunne's benefit, on the theory, doubtless, that in a political campaign every knock is a boost.

Willis Mahoney, mayor of Klamath Falls, also took to the air during the past week in a political broadcast which can be interpreted only as an endorsement of the Zimmerman candidacy. Mahoney propounded a ten-point political platform on which he demanded that the three candidates for governor take a stand. Inasmuch as the Progressive candidate is the only one who can support the Mahoney platform in its entirety it is expected that the Klamath Falls mayor will urge his followers to swing into the Zimmerman column in his next broadcast.

Tentative budgets submitted to the board of control by the state's eleven institutions, covering needs for the next biennium, total $4,435,281 or nearly $1,800,000 more than the $2,645,554 approved by the 1933 legislature for the current biennium. Approximately $925,000 of the increase is accounted for by new buildings to accommodate increased populations. Inclusion of salaries and wages at the base rate and soaring commodity costs which are reflected in increased operating costs account for the remainder of the budget increase.

The state hospital for the insane at Salem has presented a budget calling for a total of $1,548,050 or more than one-third of the total for the 11 institutions. Of this amount $402,962 is for capital outlays, including $220,000 for a new wing and $100,000 for a new two-story combination garage and chapel.

Next in size is the state prison budget totalling $580,000 which includes $100,000 for a new fire-proof dining room and hospital.

The 1935-36 budget of the Eastern Oregon state hospital at Pendleton totalling $460,356 makes no provision for new buildings although Superintendent McNary has pointed out the need of a receiving ward at his institution and additional accommodations for patients.

The institution for feeble minded has a budget totalling $559,600 which includes $50,000 for a new girls' dormitory and $8000 for a superintendent's cottage.

Both of the tuberculosis hospitals are asking for new buildings. The Salem hospital has a budget totalling $189,937 which includes modernization of the old administration building at a cost of $26,000, addition of another story to the new hospital building at a cost of $15,000, a nurses home to cost $31,000 and a physicians building to cost $6000. The newer hospital at The Dalles is asking for a total of $410,328 of which $136,300 is for new buildings including a new 100-bed unit to cost $85,000, and a nurses' building to cost $27,000, a power plant estimated at $11,500 and a children's ward to cost $15,000.

The $247,106 budget of the school for deaf includes $60,900 for a new primary building and the $159,272 budget for the school for blind includes an item of $75,000 for building and furnishing a new dormitory to house the girl students of the institution who now live in the old frame administration building which has been condemned as a fire-trap by the state fire marshal.

No new buildings are included in the budgets of the industrial school for girls, totalling $88,442, the training school for boys totalling $126,446 or the blind trade school at Portland which calls for $66,407.

All of the institutional budgets are subject to approval by the board of control before being submitted to the budget director who, in turn, will scrutinize them for possible reductions before passing them on to the state legislature next January.
