The Old Gentleman Has Gone on a Spree.

SHADES of Harvey Scott! What's happened to the Old Oregonian? Tuesday morning there were signs that the respectable old gentleman was becoming a bit inebriated; but yesterday, beyond any doubt, he was outright drunk.

From infancy seventy years ago when that vigorous young stripling first saw the light of day, the Oregonian—Harvey Scott's Oregonian—was guided in its every step by a firm paternal hand.

But, what caused him to do it, after all these years? Was it the whiskey ads alone? Is he succumbing to the New Deal? Maybe he's just reaching his dotage; or is it second childhood? Has a vampire come into his life?

BOARDMAN

Miss Clara Ruff resumed her teaching in the local high school Monday after a long illness with typhoid fever.

ment at the Community church gave way, letting the concrete foundation on the north wing fall in, and at about 10 o'clock that evening the chimney, which had been weakened by the cave-in, fell, throwing bricks over the roof and down through the main part of the building. The eaves were damaged, one rafter broken and the plaster broken in several places.

A large crowd enjoyed the program at the Parent-Teachers meeting last Friday evening. Dr. Rice of Heppner gave an interesting talk on "Typhoid," a subject of interest in this community.

Election of officers was held at the regular meeting of Greenfield grange Saturday evening. The officers elected are: Master, P. M. Smith; overseer, Ray Barlow; steward, Dan Ramsier; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Claud Coats; gatekeeper, George Mitchell; secretary, George Wicklander; treasurer, Mrs. I. L. Stout; Flora, Mrs. Ray Brown; Ceres, Mrs. Ray Barlow; Pomona, Mrs. I. Skoube; chaplain, Mrs. Wicklander.

A group of Boardman citizens met Thursday evening, November 15, at the Nate Macomber home for the improvement and betterment of the town. The club has been named the Boardman Boosters Community club.

W. R. Courtright and Willard Baker spent several days in La Grande the first of the week. A party will be given by the Christian Endeavor in Root's hall Friday evening, Nov. 23. Elsie Wilson and Ada May Harford are in charge.

CECIL

A number of ranches on lower Willow creek have changed hands this fall, the newcomers being John Marti and family on the Dick White ranch, Mrs. Maude Volle on the Shane place, the Wells family on the Melvin Logan ranch, Mr. and Mrs. Lamb and children on the Ed Farnsworth ranch, and Emory Morgan taking the Wm. Chandler place.

These frequent rains are making our fields and roadsides wonderfully green with every prospect for a bumper crop next season.

The three small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lamb have been suffering with whooping cough but seem to be on the mend now.

John Bubeck has been improving his residence by building two new brick flues and otherwise getting ready for winter weather.

Eugene—J. W. Webb and A. E. Webb of Fisher are cooperating on an irrigation project to provide both farms with supplemental water from one ditch.

Enrolling the President

Five-year-old Phyllis Smith perches on President Roosevelt's desk to hand to the Chief Executive his annual membership card in the American Red Cross as that organization's annual Roll Call gets under way throughout the nation.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

The Speakership Safety Legislation Judges' Salaries

By A. L. LINDBECK

SALEM.—While he, himself, makes no claims to having it in the bag every indication at this time points to the selection of John E. Cooter, Toledo farmer, as the next speaker of the House of Representatives of the Oregon legislature.

Cooter who is making an aggressive campaign in the interest of the House members personally, is known to have secured a sizeable block of pledges already. Adding impetus to his campaign this week was a statement from Earl Hill, Lane county legislator, and himself a contender for the gavel-wielding job in event the Republicans had dominated the organization, announcing his support of Cooter and urging his pledges to follow his lead.

William Einzig, state purchasing agent has asked the board of control for additional compensation as manager of the prison fax plant. In his request to the board Einzig said that he had agreed to undertake management of the fax plant without additional compensation until the plant was placed on a self-supporting basis, which point, he claims has now been reached.

The state emergency board meeting here Saturday authorized a deficiency appropriation of $23,500 to cover salaries of circuit and supreme court judges for October and November.

Records of the state department show that of the 29 circuit judges in the state only eight have taken the full 15 percent pay cut. These are L. G. Lewelling of Linn-Marion; Louis P. Howell and W. A. Ekwall of Multnomah; C. H. McCulloch of Baker; W. W. Wood of Malheur; J. W. Knowles of Union; Carl Hendricks of Gilliam, and Arthur D. Hay of Lake.

State Treasurer Holman will renew his fight for amortization of state land board loans when the legislature meets in January. Senator Chinnoch of Josephine county has agreed to introduce the necessary measures.

The forthcoming legislative session will be asked to enact a "safety-responsibility" act as a part of a revised motor vehicle code for Oregon. Such a measure, following closely the provisions of the "model bill" of the American Automobile association, has just received the official "ok" of the legislative interim committee on roads and highways which has spent the past two years in a study of the problem of automobile liability insurance.

any reductions in their salary checks. These are L. H. McMahon of Marion; E. C. Latourette of Clackamas, and Fred W. Wilson of Wasco. The other 16 judges have complied with the legislative recommendation in part, a few taking the full cut for most of the time and others for only a few months.

Plans for diverting liquor profits direct to unemployment relief work were upset by an opinion from Attorney General Van Winkle holding that this could not be done so long as there were unemployment relief certificates outstanding. So the state treasurer is offering another block of $250,000 of the certificates to investors in order to finance December relief needs.

Fred E. Kiddie, president of the state senate, arrived in Salem Saturday to take over the job of governor for a couple of weeks while Governor Meier is vacationing in California. This is Kiddie's second experience as the state's chief executive.

Attacking Social Problem With Eye to Future, Aim

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles on community planning, written for this newspaper by Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of the department of sociology at the University of Oregon, and chairman of the Oregon Planning Council.

The interim committee in recommending the "safety-responsibility" act turned thumbs down on proposals for a compulsory automobile insurance law as "inequitable and undesirable."

The measure as now drafted would require motorists involved in a traffic accident resulting in damage to property or injury to person to satisfy all judgments arising out of the accident and to establish financial responsibility for any future damages before being permitted to operate a car again.

Progress in planning for development and greater use of material and natural physical resources has progressed because adequate surveys have been made or are under way. The same technique can be applied for "human values."

From this we move on to the field of poverty, most of which is avoidable. If it is due to inefficiency, then the efficient must help. If it is due to ignorance, then we must educate. If education has failed thus far to accomplish this, then education must be more effectively adapted to the task.

Farm Women Lack Much Common Home Equipment

The wide potential market that exists among rural homemakers for common household conveniences, if and when purchasing power is restored, is indicated by an inquiry involving more than 400 farm homes in six Oregon counties, made by home demonstration agents, supervised by Miss Lucy Case, extension specialist in nutrition at Oregon State college.

More than a third of the rural homes were found to be without sinks, and more than two-thirds were without drain boards on both sides of the sinks. Only a few more than half of the homes surveyed had running water and only 39 per cent had both hot and cold water.

Home baking is the rule, with percentages ranging from 39 per cent who bake all of their bread to 74 per cent who bake all of their cakes.

Inquiry also revealed that as many as half of the homemakers would be found without such simple kitchen equipment as quart and pint measures, measuring cups and spoons, and fruit and vegetable shredders.
