What's In a Name?

HEPPNER'S correspondent for the Pendleton East Oregonian refers to the Heppner-Spray road as the Pendleton-Prineville cut-off. How come?

Does it please the East Oregonian, the editor of which is a member of the state highway commission, to capitalize upon the long applied efforts of the people of Heppner to obtain recognition for a route which has had to battle continued opposition by pet projects of that

Through its editorial and news columns, the East Oregonian has ever and anon poured out sop to the people of Morrow county, valuing highly the trade dollars of this region, yet giving little to show deeper interest over this way.

It took years of hammering to bring the East Oregonian to realize the existence of the Heppner-Spray Then its editor took cogni zance of the fact that the road would link in with the John Day north and south highway to make a likely route for a day's joyride for Pendleton people.

After the appointment of Mr. Aldrich, the East Oregonian editor, to a place on the state highway commission, the section of the Ore gon-Washington highway from Nye, the junction point with the "North South" highway, to Heppner Junction was removed from federal highway map. Coincidentally, a considerable portion of the "North and South" highway was placed on the federal map, and shortly thereafter the route was benefitted by federal funds. This was done but shortly after the Oregon - Washington highway from Pilot Rock to Nye had been straightened, widened and oiled to federal standard. In removal of the Heppner Junction-Nye portion of the Oregon-Washington highway from the federal map, that stretch was relieved from any claim to federal aid. Since that time, the portion from Heppner to Nye has deteriorated rapidly. At the present season it is almost entirely unused because it has been covered with dirt which has become muddy and treacherous with wet weather. Heppner people, even now, who want to spend their dollars in Pendleton are forced to Heppner has battled for every inch of improvement of the Heppner-Spray road, and what has been obtained has come in spite of the East Oregonian's admitted interest. But now it is to be known as the Pendleton-Prineville cut-off. A wise man once said:

The strawberry clover is being tested out at the Hermiston branch station. It gives unusual promise under certain restricted circumstances, says H. K. Dean, superintendent of the station. Its value is expected to be as a pasture crop on alkali land. It has demonstrated exceptional resistance to alkali and over-watering, even being able to rowd out salt at Yakima where already stock appear to relish it, but no real pasture tests have been made with

It is a cross between a sunflower and a thistle, and is a dwarf, spiny plant that so far has proved drouth resistant on the branch station at Pendleton. It has yielded as high as 1600 pounds of seed to the acre, which yields about 25 per cent oil.

Scores of other new plants are constantly being tested on the branch stations, most of which never prove to be of any value un-
