Old OSC Dormitory Being Remodeled by SERA Men

Corvallis—Historic old Kidder hall at OSC, formerly called Cawthorn hall and used successively since 1892 as a men's and then a women's dormitory, has ended its days as a residence hall and will, when next put in service, be an instructional building. An SERA project for remodeling the interior of the sound old frame structure has been approved by state and local officials.

Only the two lower floors will be remodeled for the present, and in them will be concentrated the entire service work in art instruction now scattered through three campus buildings. Art courses are required fundamental training for students in home economics, some branches of engineering, and other technical schools.

With relief labor being supplied, the cost to the state for the remodeling job will be only for materials. When completed the building will have a replacement value of nearly three times its original cost when erected more than 40 years ago.

FOSSILS SHOW CHANGE.

Corvallis—Fossil leaves gathered at Comstock, Douglas county, include many from trees now found native only in China, Japan, Ceylon and Formosa, finds Dr. Ethel

I. Sanborn, associate professor of botany at Oregon State college, who is making a study of them.

The prehistoric flora of the region was very different from the flora of today, indicating a warm temperate or sub-tropical climate. Some fossil leaves show close resemblance to modern plants in Mexico and Central America.
