Official Paper for Morrow County

Louisiana-ward.

HUEY LONG has brought anathema to all schemes of state dictatorship. He has infiltrated Louisiana's government with graft and corruption. So uncertain is he of the effects of his government escapes, that he dares not go forth without a heavily-armed body guard.

It is not likely that Governor Martin would be a second Huey Long should he be given such powers before the present legislature proposes. But certainly, should the legislature see fit to grant the powers asked, he would be in a hardly lesser position to dictate than is the case of Louisiana.

RHEA CREEK GRANGE NEWS. The H. E. club of the grange will meet with Mrs. Chas. Beckett on Thursday of this week.

There will be a dance at Rhea creek hall Saturday, Jan. 26th. Beckett's orchestra for music and hot dogs for lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Wright attended the wool growers meeting in Heppner.

The three small children of Mr. and Mrs. John Bergstrom are ill with whooping cough. Mrs. Bergstrom brought them to town to be near a doctor.

Bobbie Wright is back in school after having chickenpox.

The heavy wind played havoc with what little snow that was on the wheat fields on Eight Mile and Rhea creek, filling the roads and ditches.

Very cold weather was reported prior to the coming of the south wind. Eight Mile reported 14 to 15 degrees below zero, Rhea creek 18 below, and McKinney creek 18 below.

EVERYTHING THAT'S BEST IN EATS For any and all occasions

Life of a Legislator

By CLINTON P. HAIGHT, Editor, Blue Mountain Eagle, Canyon City, Ore.

(Editor's Note—Legislator Haight, described by Oregon Voter as the irrefragable, irrefutable editor of the oft-quoted Blue Mountain Eagle, whose exaggerated self-depreciation and drolleries have popularized him with the people of southeast Oregon, is writing this column, which we hope to present to our readers each week during the present legislative session.

And so this is the legislature, the House, one of the three legs upon which the grand old state of Oregon stands, like a tripod—the executive, judicial and legislative—and under our form of government, it is with the legislative leg that government limps.

It is a beautiful room, ornate, pretentious, gilded and with the great windows embellished with the stained art glass of the cathedral of medieval mystery.

The room looks much larger than it is, with the speaker, John Cooter, standing up behind an elevated bar, like a saloon. Down in front of him is another bar where a cow-puncher from Eastern Oregon might be tempted to step up and buy a drink.

Behind this bar are four or five bartenders and a member can step up to the bar and order a resolution, memorial or a bill or you can find out anything that has happened here for 25 years, from Fred Drager, the chief clerk who knows what's what, who's who and why.

And to the left is the press with their noiseless typewriters grinding out the dope that you folks back home get in your daily newspapers. There is Larry Smyth of the Oregon Journal; Duane Hennessy, Oregonian; C. C. Chapman, with a bale of data on legislation, from the time of the great law-giver Moses down to four minutes past four, Saturday; and C. K. Logan, Associated Press and Salem Capital Journal; Wilfred C. Hagedorn, Albany Democrat-Herald; and the rest of the quill pushers, who have eyes like blue eagles, noses like hounds and ears like wild gazelles.

They know all, see all and feel bored. But they are the boys who give you the dope. And then there are the 60 desks and each member or debater sits in a swivel chair with his charming and beautiful stenog sitting on his right, with a face dimpled in a wreath of smiles, and with his wife on his left, scowling and bored. It looks like a school room, and were it not for the expense to the taxpayers, we would insist that every member be supplied with an old-time school room slate, slate pencil and sponge, for he has everything else on his desk even down to a silver mounted dagger to open his mail from his infuriated constituency.

Upon each desk are law books enough to open a supreme court. In the back part of the room are the bleachers, and bobbing about are the bell hops or pages, attaches, helpers, or what we might call the hay hands, and there is Wyatt Williams, blacker than Egyptian night, master of the cloak room, and by the way, he is a graduate attorney.

We started out to tell you that this room, known as the House, was not on the square, for we have just stepped it off, and it is 75 by 90 feet. And again we might tell you about the coronation of the governor, with its pageantry, its magnificence, dignity and splendor, with the flare of trumpets amid official ostentation, and the members of the supreme court wearing black Mother Hubbards like grandma used to wear, looking down upon this vast throng of dignitaries and officers, past, present and future were the life-sized portraits of 18 governors from their gilded frames. It was grand and great and dull, dumb and droll and a bore to some—an inspiration to others.

We determined to learn the business of the legislature from the ground up and so we went down in the cellar of the capitol and got acquainted with the cook. It is Burt Cray and he runs the restaurant for the hungry members and job hunters and of course we did not overlook Josephine Anderson and pretty Mary Stovell who preside at the pie counter with great culinary dignity.

The fate of bills you will get in your daily newspapers but they will probably not tell you that every time they read the roll call there come in order the names of Barnes, Bolvin and Bull.

PINE CITY By LENNA NEILL Burl and Earle Wattenburger were business visitors in Echo and Hermiston Saturday.

Miss Iris Omohundro was an overnight guest at the Ollie Neill home Friday night.

Rudolph Gieger spent Monday afternoon at the W. D. Neill home. Fred Rauch was a business visitor in Hermiston Friday.

Mrs. J. S. Moore and John Moore were business visitors in Hermiston Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Omohundro and son Raymond were visitors in Hermiston Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Boylen and children spent Sunday at the Boylen ranch on Butter creek.

Mrs. E. B. Wattenburger and children spent Sunday afternoon visiting Mrs. Earl Abbott.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ayers were business visitors in Hermiston on Tuesday.

HARDMAN By LUCILLE FARRENS Mr. and Mrs. James Brannon entertained the community at an old time dance last Saturday evening.

The large crowd which was in attendance report a very enjoyable time. A pot-luck supper was served at midnight. Ed Moreland, Roy Ashbaugh and Jim Brannon furnished the music.

The young people of the community met together last Friday evening at the high school auditorium for a dancing party. Roy Ashbaugh obliged at the piano. A pot-luck supper was served at midnight.

Construction on the last gap of the Heppner-Spray road was forced to cease the first of the week due to the heavy snow on Rock creek. The contractors will resume operations as soon as weather conditions permit. There was about 16 inches of snow in the vicinity of the construction work.

Mrs. James Brannon was given a surprise party last Monday evening. The occasion was her twenty-first birthday. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burns and family, Edith Stevens, Cecile Hicks, Delbert Carmen, Roy and Lester Ashbaugh. Wes Brannon and family, Herbert McDaniel and Mr. and Mrs. James Brannon. Ice cream was enjoyed.

The Rebekahs and Odd Fellows jointly entertained in honor of some new members which are taking the degrees in the I. O. O. F. last Saturday evening. A bountiful dinner was served during the evening. Visitors from neighboring orders were invited but the bad weather conditions prevented many from attending.

The coldest weather of the winter prevailed here the latter part of the week with the thermometer registering 20 degrees below last Saturday night. Several other nights it was around 10 and 14 degrees below. Tuesday the chinook set in and at this writing the snow is rapidly disappearing.

FIRST PH. D. EXAM GIVEN. Corvallis.—The first examination for the Doctor of Philosophy degree ever given at Oregon State college was taken recently by Earl Klem, Eugene, a graduate student in chemistry in the school of science. Klem was successful in the examination and will have the honor of receiving the first Ph. D. degree at Commencement next June. He is a graduate of the University of Oregon, who continued his work in the school of science when it was transferred to Corvallis.

French Burroughs was in town yesterday from out Rhea creek way.

UNDER LAMPS LIKE THESE!

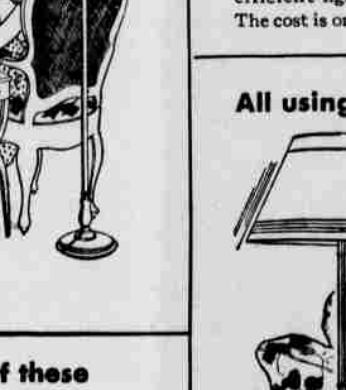

Any lamp which bears this I.E.S. tag is scientifically correct. It gives 6 to 10 times more useful light than an ordinary lamp, yet uses no more current. The light is glareless and properly diffused, too, and the lamps themselves are truly beautiful.

New floor lamps give choice of light intensities! Because I.E.S. floor lamps are equipped with the marvelous 3-way Mazda bulbs, you can select your most comfortable intensity of light—100, 200 or 300 watts. Complete with bulb and parchment shade, these sight-saving lamps are priced as low as $12.95

Modernizes old-fashioned drop light! Just screw this Renu-lite into your kitchen or bathroom drop light as you would an ordinary bulb. Gives abundant, efficient light. The cost is only $1.95

All using this lamp see without eyestrain! The new study and reading lamps are the most remarkable table lamps ever designed. They produce the correct combination of direct and indirect light because of a concealed bowl of diffusing glass under their parchment shades. Every school child should have one. Prices, which include bulb and shade, start at $5.95

You'll want several of these handy lamps! "Pin-It-Up" lamps are just what their name implies. They can be pinned wherever light is required. Made in many attractive styles, which begin at $1.30
