Protecting the Watershed

HEPPNER and the entire Willow Creek valley should become aroused to the need of protecting the large portion of the Willow Creek watershed now up for sale in course of liquidation of the First National Bank of Heppner. The matter was proposed to the city council last Monday evening and that body memorialized congress to have the area thrown into the national forest. Other organizations of the valley should follow suit, to the end that in event of sale the natural reservoir of the valley will be properly protected.

It has been suggested that the area be acquired by the city of Heppner as a long-time amortization plan of payment and a loan of federal funds could be effected. Objection to this plan presents itself in that administration of such a large area would be too large a task for the city. It would seem more logical that it be taken over by the national forest, whose policies of protection are adequate and whose administration facilities are already established.

Wisdom in Planning

HEPPNER'S city dads are taking time by the forelock in planning major improvements for the city. Whether or not state or national funds can be obtained to bring realization of these plans, the procedure is proper and reflects wisdom. Several miles of wooden pipe line in the city's water system have already passed the allotted time given it on installation. It has become decayed and leaky, a source not only of constant trouble, but a threat of contamination as well. It must be replaced.

Again is the spectacle of the city streets, gradually reverting to the condition which existed before any steps of improvement were taken. A plan of permanent improvement is most feasible and logical.

A sewage system, too, is needed, and should be installed along with any permanent street improvement. Cities no larger than Heppner have these modern conveniences, and Heppner is paying for them whether or not they are had. The problem is to outline a program covering a period of years, possibly doing a little at a time, until full realization of the plans can be had.

Less Work for the Clerks

THE county clerks' state association has again proposed a bill before the legislature asking that they be required to make but one report a year instead of semi-annual reports as now provided. It is no secret that if the majority of public officers had their way, no public reports would be given, for the making of such reports naturally entails work.

This county is one of several counties that have had sad experiences with keeping of proper records. Publication of full reports of public business is guarantee to the public that its business is being properly handled. We believe our people would be slow to sanction any move which tends to remove this guarantee.

We thank you, Bend Bulletin, for your kind words: "There has come to this desk a copy of the special number issued by the Heppner Gazette Times on the occasion of the meeting of the Oregon Wool Growers' association in its city last week. This souvenir, on heavy book paper, well edited, well illustrated and well printed, is a credit to the shop and the men who produced it. For the wool growers who attended the meeting it will remain a particularly pleasant souvenir of their gathering in Heppner. The Crawford family, father and sons, have long given their community a fine newspaper. The edition well shows the quality of their work."

Hank Howell, genial weather prophet at the court house, rises to remark that the ground hog like lots of other things in this country doesn't always run true to form.

It is noticed that Oregon's democratic legislature now not only has deserted its idea of adjourning in the allotted forty days, but is looking forward to a special session to consider the really important tasks confronting it. In the first two weeks one bill was passed, providing for their own pay.

Oldsters Gaining on Youngsters

In 1880 the number of those under 20 years old in this country was four times as great as those over 50. In 1930 the proportion was only two to one. At the present rate of change the two groups will be equal by 1950. These figures are cited by Dr. E. H. Moore, professor of sociology at Oregon State college, as one of several sociological reasons why the question of old age pensions has become a live issue in America.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hunt, Sunday, a 9-pound daughter.
