Crime Does Not Pay.

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPT-MANN took the life of a small child, and in return will give his That was the decision of own. twelve jurors whose verdict brought to a close probably the most dramatic and one of the most baffling kidnap-murder cases of all time.

The people of the entire world never more incensed than when they received news of the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., son and heir of the first aviator to complete a solo flight between the United States and Europe, whose feat made him a world idol. Doubly was the world incensed when finding of the child's lifeless form revealed the true gruesomeness of the crime.

It may have been the decree of fate that there should be only one Charles A. Lindbergh. But has not fate also decreed to take the life of him who took the life of the second Charles A. Lindbergh?

Who knows to what heights Baby Lindbergh might have risen had he lived? The hope and confidence of the world were centered upon his Fish. The fight is whether the fish small form.
