STATE CAPITAL NEWS

- Public Purse, Timber Purchase, The Veto Axe. By A. L. LINDBECK

SALEM.—In spite of the extraordinary demands upon the public purse the legislature did no violence to the state's general fund at its recent session.

Authorized expenditures totalling $17,788,590 are still well under the $17,776,289 which the tax commission estimates as the anticipated receipts for the biennium.

Included in 1935 appropriations are two items of $1,000,000 each, one for old age pensions and the other for indigent relief.

Whereas no major capital outlays were authorized two years ago new buildings at four of the state institutions to cost a total of 221,500 were authorized by the 1935 session.

Increases were also found to be necessary in the institutional appropriations to meet growing populations and higher commodity prices.

Clint Haight, representative from Grant county who gained considerable attention at the outset of the legislative session when he announced that he was homesick and wanted to hear the coyote howl, stirred the house to riotous laughter on the closing night of the session when he announced that he was now ready to "go home and listen to my constituents howl."

Counties have nothing to fear under the recently enacted timber acquisition bill. No timber land can be sold to the federal government under the terms of the legislative act without the consent of the county court.

This safeguarding was written into the Oregon act by the senate is not contained in similar acts adopted by the legislatures of California and Washington.

The measure in question is an enabling act which would permit the federal government to buy up timbered tracts adjacent to forest reserves which are now in private possession. Taxes delinquent upon the tracts at the time of the sale would have to be paid before the deal could be consummated.

County officials attempted to write into the act a provision requiring the federal government to pay taxes upon the land after it was taken out of private ownership. Such a requirement, in the opinion of Governor Martin would have precluded the sale of any lands in this state.

Forestry officials do not expect that the federal government will purchase much land in western states but will confine their purchases largely to eastern states where there are now no forest reserves.

Governor Martin's veto axe has fallen with deadly effect on a number of the budding young laws of the recent session. The amended milk control act was vetoed on the afternoon of the closing day and friends of the measure were unable to muster enough votes to pass it over the executive veto.

feared the junior college bill would operate toward an increase of the burden borne by the taxpayers for the support of education. The attorney hire bill was vetoed because it did not meet with the views of the governor as to the manner in which this problem should be solved.

Automobile registrations for the first two months of 1935 increased 5.73 percent over those of the same period in 1934, according to Secretary of State Snell. Fees show an increase of 7.03 percent for the same period.

Already speculation is rife as to who will wield the gavel in the House and Senate next session. Should the Democrats again dominate the House the Speaker will undoubtedly be one of the younger members who distinguished themselves during the past session. Among these are Dickson of Multnomah county; Hamilton of Jackson county or Wallace of Multnomah. If there should be a reversal in the political complexion of the House and the Republicans swing back into control the Speakership would probably go to Representative Angell of Multnomah or Fattland of Gilliam. In the senate Franciscoovich of Clatsop and Duncan of Harney are regarded as the outstanding contenders for presidential honors on the Republican side while the veteran Strayer and Baker would unquestionably have first chance at the honor should the Democrats come into their own with Goss of Coos, Dickson of Multnomah and Wallace of Deschutes all regarded as possible candidates in the event Strayer should pass up the opportunity.

The senate refused to support the House resolution calling for an increase in the legislative per diem to $720 for the biennium but batched up one of their own, which in some respects, is even more open to the charge of extravagance. The senate resolution which was approved by the House and will be on the ballot at the next general election would remove the constitutional limitation on pay of the lawmakers and give the legislators a free hand to write their own ticket.

Before the taxpayers are going to consent to any such arrangement it will probably be necessary for the lawmakers to make a better showing of economy in the management of their business than they have so far. Clerk and stenographic hire over which the legislators exercise complete control ranges well above that of other states of comparative populations. That was true in 1933 and will probably be even more so for the 1935 session with employee-cost increasing approximately 25 percent over that of the last previous session. Clerks, stenographers and other employees on the payroll of the 1935 session cost the taxpayers $59,899.50 compared to $46,990 for the 1933 session. In the senate this item amounted to $21,621 compared to $19,267 two years ago. The House paid its employees a total of $38,278 compared to $27,693 for the 1933 session.

Although the session has adjourned the presiding officers and desk clerks will continue on the job for another month revising the House and Senate journals.

Only two measures were referred to the people by the legislature. One of these provides for a change in the primary election date from May to September. The other involves a constitutional amendment which would permit the legislators to fix their own pay. Reports received here, however, are that three other legislative measures may be subjected to the referendum. One of these is the timber acquisition bill which is meeting with the opposition of county officials, another is the measure closing the Rogue river to commercial fishing and the third is the measure making payment of student body fees at state institutions of higher learning compulsory.

Soon be time to buy new drivers' licenses. Secretary of State Snell says that all licenses issued out standing expire on June 30 of this year. More than 380,000 motorists are licensed to drive in Oregon.

WILLOWS GRANGE NEWS. The Home Economics club met at the home of Sister Etta Bristolw in Ione last Friday with sixteen members and two guests present. The next meeting of the club will be on April 19 with Sisters Anna and Nina Ball as hostesses.

Brother and Sister Lewis Ball with their family recently moved into the house recently vacated by Brother and Sister Earl Morgan. The Morgans are now located on Rook creek near the Milkalo grange hall.

A number of grangers met at their hall in Cecil last Sunday where they enjoyed some real good mulligan, chicken and noodles, etc. The paper that had been loosened by the hard winds was refastened, walls stripped and the kitchen finished. Some much needed shelves were also put in, adding much to the kitchen facilities. Measurements were also taken for a new locker to be placed in the hall.

Lady Assistant Steward, Mrs. James Lindsay, was honored with a birthday dinner Sunday prepared by her two daughters. The table was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

We are pleased to welcome two of our members home after a winter spent in Minnesota. Brother and Sister M. E. Cotter were called to Mr. Cotter's former home in December by the illness of his mother who passed away before their arrival.

Next Saturday evening, March 23rd, is the regular meeting night of Willows grange. The 3rd and 4th degrees will be exemplified to a class of candidates. Cake, jello and coffee will be served by the young folks committee.

Urges Early Application For Production Loans

Acting on the invitation to "apply early," local farmers are beginning to arrange with the Pendleton Production Credit association for the finances they will require to carry on their season's operations. "Farmers who get their loan applications approved early have everything to gain and nothing to lose," says Secretary-Treasurer W. E. Moore. "Interest at the low rate of 5 per cent does not begin, of course, until the borrower puts the money to work. It is figured on a net basis for just the length of time the advanced sums are outstanding, payable at the end of the season when the loan is retired."

This system of cooperative credit was designed especially to meet the needs of agriculture in an economical, constructive way. Farmers can derive real benefits, both now and in the future, from this self-help method of financing. But they must not regard their PCA as a "relief" agency or expect it to make unsound loans.

"A large part of our past economic trouble has been due to 'easy' credit or unsystematic use of credit. We don't want to repeat these mistakes. That's why our association is trying to follow a conservative, constructive course. So while we are ready to be of maximum service in offering farmers low cost, dependable financing, this doesn't mean that we can follow a 'wide open' policy. In the long run, a careful loan policy will serve agriculture to the best advantage."

"Some people have the wrong impression that we are a government agency set up to dish out emergency funds. Such, of course, is not the case. The Pendleton Production association is the farmer's own cooperative institution for making production loans on a sound business basis at actual cost. It is true that the federal government, acting through the Production Credit Corporation of Spokane has an investment in our Class A non-voting stock and exercises general supervision. But as rapidly as our association builds up its resources the government's stock will be retired. Eventually, therefore, our Class B borrower-stockholders can become the full owners. Even now, however, member-borrowers have full voting power in the selection of local directors who are responsible for the association's conduct of business."

"This farmers of this territory have a most unusual opportunity to build up their own permanent system for dependable, low-cost financing. An almost unlimited volume of loan funds will continue to be available through the Federal Intermediate Credit bank 'tight' money times or 'easy,' because the credit bank has a ready demand for the debentures it sells to private investors. The cost of this money will depend in large degree upon the character of the notes we send to the credit bank for discounting. At present FIBIC debentures have such high standing that PCA borrowers are getting financed at the lowest rate in history."

"The future of this cooperative credit system is largely right in our own hands. Naturally, our volume of business must be large enough to pay the overhead of our association but we must maintain a sound foundation, encouraging farmers to use credit wisely. Fundamentally we are organized for beneficial service and not for profit. It is not good business for farmers to borrow at all unless they can make profitable use of the money and repay it from the proceeds of their operations. "Out of experience gained last year, several short-cuts have been made so we can now serve borrowers more promptly and conveniently. Even so, however, we suggest that applications be made as early as possible. This will enable us to give better service. Good service and fair, helpful treatment is our aim."

Constipated?

The doctors say... Use liquid treatment

Here is the soundest advice anyone can give on the subject of laxatives. It is based on medical opinion. We want you to have the benefit of this information no matter what laxative you may buy:

The secret of real relief from constipation is reduced dosage. You can't regulate the bowels unless you can regulate the help you give them. That is why doctors use a liquid laxative; the dose can be measured to a drop.

Avoid laxatives that you can't cut down in dosage; especially those that seem to require larger doses than when you began their use.

Under the doctor's care, you usually get a liquid laxative. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. Smaller and smaller doses—until you don't need any.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—natural laxatives that form no habit.
