Editorial
Baseball died out at Heppner high with a very unsuccessful season in the spring of 1927. The few dismal fans thought the sport had departed for good.

But last Friday at the Rodeo field the "bug" monopolized the grandstand, baseball came back to Heppner high with a bang, and the team won its first game of the year by beating Ione in a last inning rally. A few more games such as the one last Friday and Heppner high school baseball will be anchored as firmly as football or basketball.

Assembly
A special assembly was held on Tuesday morning in which Dr. Poling, the Oregon representative of higher education, spoke about the desirability of college education and training. After the assembly Dr. Poling talked with the seniors, advising them and answering personal questions.

Open House
The Open House, presented by the Heppner public schools Friday, April 5, opened at seven o'clock in the school building.

All the grades and rooms in the building were full of exhibits made by the pupils themselves. Of the high school rooms there was the typing room, which had on exhibit an old typewriter, one of the first ones made, also exhibits of contracts, graphs, and designs which were made on a typewriter. One of the most important exhibits of the English room was the novel which was written by the sophomore English class. The exhibits in the geometry room that were the most outstanding were the geometrical designs made by the geometry students. In the home economics room exhibits of dresses, made by the clothing students, and pictures and paintings, made by the art and design students, were displayed. The chemistry and physics lab, which was the attraction of the younger group, had many interesting things, some of which were experiments performed and explained by the students, model engines, and static machine. The bookkeeping and shorthand room had exhibits of sets made in bookkeeping and booklets written in shorthand by the shorthand students. The biology room had parts of human skeleton and a picture of a group of ducks on display. The grade school had various decorations and exhibits of what they have been doing in their work.

TREES PLANTED IN SHERMAN
More—Many Sherman county farmers are taking advantage of the fact that young trees of many kinds are available at the Oregon State forestry nursery at Corvallis for cost of transportation, and are planting windbreaks and shelter belts, reports Perry N. Johnston, county agent. Mr. Johnston estimates that some 15,000 of these trees will be planted in Sherman county this year. Ted Rolfe of Grass Valley is cooperating with Mr. Johnston in the planting of an acre of black locust trees to determine if it is profitable to grow these trees for fence posts.

Kenneth and Vernon Warner, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Warner, were in town yesterday from Lexington.

Miss Frances Doherty underwent a minor operation at Heppner hospital yesterday.
