- Special Session.
- Truck and Bus Act.
- Milk Control. By A. L. LINDBECK

Salem.-Governor Martin will not convene the legislature in special session unless such action becomes absolutely necessary. This much he made clear to newpapermen here this week in commenting upon ru-mors which persist to the effect that the lawmakers will be back in Salem before the Fourth of July.

Only two contingencies now loom on the political horizon which would proceedings within the next few make an extraordinary session necessary. One of these is the neces-sity for making Oregon's old age security legislation mesh with the Congressional act. The other is the contact man for the state adminisnecessity of legislative action in tration. McCulloch has been filling preparing for the predicted influx of new settlers from the droutha number of speaking engagements for the governor before granges, and dust-ridden middle west. chambers of commerce and other

The first contingency was thought to have been covered in the old age pension appropriation measure passed by the regular session, which places $1,000,000 of state funds at the disposal of the emergency relief committee to be spent in cooperation with the counties and the federal government. A meeting of the governor's planning board in Portland Tuesday gave consideration to the reception and proper care of new settlers but any definite action in this direction will await further information from Washington as to what the federal government plans to do for these new settlers.

found in the eager participation of homemakers in the recreation pro-Once more the governor has out-smarted political prognosticators. Hugh H. Earle of Eugene, whom he gram in the series of family living conferences held in many counties appointed this week as insurance commissioner, had been definitely eliminated from the race several weeks ago based on confidential information from "those close to the administration." Incidentally the A new mimeographed leaflet on home recreation just prepared by governor has informed the press that there will be at least one Miss Skow has already been mailed change on the industrial accident upon request to more than 600 commission, probably to replace T. homemakers, and more are going Morris Dunne of Portland, and that he will appoint another member of the highway commission within the next few weeks to relieve Carl Washburn of Eugene who has been trying to quit for some time. Any aid the federal government proposes to give to rural schools this year will come too late to do on much good according to C. Ore A. Howard, state superintendent of public instruction. Several of the weaker school districts have been compelled to close already due to shortage of funds and all of the schools will be closing their regular terms within the next six weeks. Oscar Hayter, Dallas attorney, Frank C. McCulloch, utilities commissioner, and R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer, have been com-missioned by Governor Martin to revamp the truck and bus act for consideration by the next legislature. No piece of legislation in the recent history of Oregon has been the subject of so much bitter controversy as this one which was first enacted by the regular session of little guests. 1933 and later amended by the second special session of that year and again by the recent regular session of 1935. One of the most frequent visitors to the executive department the past few weeks has been Floyd Cook of Portland. One of the four horsemen of the Republican party whose mission it was to harass the Democratic organization in the recent campaign Cook seems to have a ready entre to the inner sanctum of Governor Martin's office which is not enjoyed by even the governor's most ardent supporters. Cook's explanation that his visits are "purely friendly" lack a lot in explaining his stand-in with the democratic administration. Reorganization of the milk control board this week came as a bolt out of the blue. While the removal of E. G. Harlan of Eugene was expected it was generally believed that her. the other two members of the board Ma -Barge Mason of Klamath Falls and O. M. Plummer of Portlandwould be retained. The milk coop-eratives were known to be after Harlan's hide, especially since he butted into the milk control fight at the recent legislature, but were ap-parently pretty well satisfied with both Mason and Plummer.
