Easter Trip Three happy teachers returning from their Easter vacation were leisurely riding along discussing their plans for the wedding which they intended to attend that afternoon.

They little realized what was to happen so suddenly that would shatter all their valuable plans.

"Something must be wrong with this car."

"Do you suppose the engine is out of commission?"

"No, it can't be that."

During this conversation the driver used her better judgment by driving to the right side of the road, for the car was just creeping along.

Now what—three little distracted teachers with a car that wouldn't go and the wedding bells merrily ringing!

"The gas! Do you suppose we are out of gas?"

They scrambled out to see, and, to their embarrassment, found they were!

"Well, one of us will have to go borrow some gas, if we get to the wedding."

The driver said she would go but the other two insisted on going. The conclusion was that they would all go in search of farm houses, but each in a different direction.

As a result, two of the teachers returned to the car about the same time, both with gas. But where was the third?

They would wait for her to return. No, they could save time by going after her.

In the meantime the third teacher had become confused as to which direction she had come, when she looked up and saw the car approaching.

After all this trouble they were still interested in the wedding and started back to town. But the efforts proved to be of no value, for they were just two hours late. The wedding was over.

There were three disgusted little teachers, but they realized they had put forth all their efforts to fulfill their plans.

Grade News The fourth grade received a letter from fourth graders in Boyd, Oregon. In the letter it told in detail all about the activities of the school, the number of pupils enrolled, the color scheme of the school house, and many other interesting details.

The Heppner fourth graders are now planning to answer the letter.

Sulfur Application Trial Made Redmond—A demonstration trial to determine whether March or May application of sulfur on Alaska clover gives the best control of mildew has been established on the farm of A. J. Gornason of Tumalo, in cooperation with County Agent Gus Hagglund.

One plot was treated in March, one will be treated in May, and one will be reserved with no treatment as a check against the other two.

Thistles Killed by Cultivation. Hillsboro—A five-acre patch of Canadian thistles was killed by cultivation on the M. P. Cady farm at a cost of $16 an acre, reports L. E. Francis, assistant county agent. Mr. Cady cultivated 10 times each summer for two years, using a six foot cover-crop disk and a two-ton Clear-tracker tractor.

Cultivation is one of the most satisfactory means for controlling Canadian thistle and morning glory, particularly in areas large enough that the cost of chemicals for the purpose would be prohibitive, Mr. Francis says.
