CAPITAL NEWS

 The Capitol Fire. Planning Board. $5,000,000 Idle.

By A. L. LINDBECK

Salem .- Destruction of the capitol building is believed to have made a special session of the legislature imperative and a special election soon thereafter entirely probable.

The session, however, will not be convened before July at the earliest in the opinion of those in the know in official circles here. Before calling the ernor Martin will doubtless want to have some definite proposal to present to them. Oregon architects have been in-require a special election to amend the constitution which now limits state indebtedness to $50,000 and to authorize a bond issue.

Search of the ruins has revealed that loss of official records in the fire was not so great as had been feared. Nothing in the treasury department or the office of the state land board was damaged except by water and valuable papers and records contained in vaults of the state and treasury departments, the land board and the tax commission were preserved intact. While George Dunsford, superin-tendent of the building, and janitors on duty at the time the fire was discovered, insist that the fire was set this theory is not held by members of the fire and police department nor by other employees of the state familiar with the building which had long been regarded as a fire trap which would some day go up in flames as it did in the fire of Thursday night.

The capitol fire caused Governor Martin suddenly to change his plans for a visit of the Coast counties and to return to Salem post haste. The governor was attending a banquet at Medford when news of the fire first reached him but the full extent of the damage was withheld from him until after he had completed his speech. He immediately announced his determination to return to the capital leaving Medford association has accomplished at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning and much since its organization. It has been in the forefront of the fight for the full development of the Co-Three Oregon counties have aptention to the fact that the legislature refused to pass a bill providhe has taken it upon himself to deswhich, while without legal authorsend a man to Washington to ity to enforce its recommendations, will act in an advisory capacity in directing the development of that section of the state.

> It cost $1645 to revise the House journals of the recent legislative session. While the actual work of revision was performed by the four desk clerks and two stenographers, eight persons were on the committee pay roll including Speaker John Cooter and Representative Hannah Martin who received $280 each for "supervising" the work.

Should there be a special election to authorize a bond issue for a new capitol building it is entirely probable that the September primary question and the legislative pay is-sue will also be up for a vote at the same time. Both of these problems were referred to the people by the last legislature.

Oregon now has $5,000,000 in its various funds lying idle in various banks and drawing no interest, according to State Treasurer Holman who has proposed that the money be used in refunding highway and other bond issues at lower rates of nterest thus killing two birds with the same stone-saving interest to the departments now paying high rates and earning interest for the general fund on the investment. Banks, which at one time were glad to pay the state for its deposits no longer want the money if they have

of 10-3. Farm Prices Climb With

Added Factory Payrolls

Keeping close step with the index of factory payrolls, average prices for Oregon farm products have climbed since March 1933 from 42 per cent of the 1926-1930 level to 69 in March 1935, according to the latest agricultural situation and outlook circular of the Oregon State college agricultural extension ser-vice. Factory payrolls from March 1933 rose from 37 per cent of the 1926-1930 level to 68 in February 1935

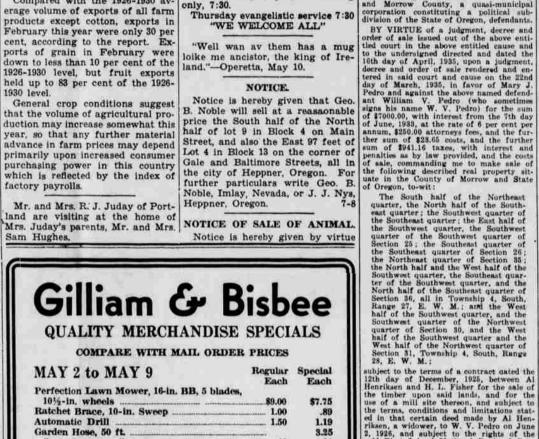

Although the increased purchasing power of consumers has probably been the major factor in the advance in Oregon farm prices, some of the increase is due to the scarcity of some farm commodities brought about by the drouth. Production control by the AAA has assisted by reducing the surpluses for which export demand had failed. Compared with the 1926-1930 average volume of exports of all farm products except cotton, exports in February this year were only 30 per cent, according to the report. Ex-ports of grain in February were down to less than 10 per cent of the 1926-1930 level, but fruit exports held up to 83 per cent of the 1926-

1930 level. General crop conditions suggest that the volume of agricultural production may increase somewhat this year, so that any further material advance in farm prices may depend primarily upon increased consumer purchasing power in this country which is reflected by the index of factory payrolls.

vited by the board of control to submit plans for a new building in competition for the honor of designing the structure and the govern-or's state planning board has been asked to make a study of the capitol problems from all angles, including, style, size to meet the state's future needs, cost and means of financing its construction. Members of the planning board meeting with the board of control here Saturday indicated that such a study would require two or three months broadcast over the state owned staat the least, although they expected to "report progress" in about thirty days.

In the meantime plans are going ahead for the temporary housing of the homeless state departments for Holman are quartered in rooms on the second floor of the supreme tire department have been made the Chambers building, the state po-lice and liquor control board in the Spaulding on Court street just opposite the capitol, the bureau of labor on the fourth floor of the office building, the budget department on the fifth floor of this same building, the board of control in the su preme court building, the department for vocational education in the agricultural building and the commission in the Elks temple.

While the state's investment in the old capitol building was less than $500,000 ti would probably cost twice that amount to replace it today due to higher wages and in-creased costs of building materials. Cost of a new building in keeping with the future needs of a growing state is estimated at a minimum of $3,000,000 with some fixing the figure as high as $6,000,000.

Telegrams received by Governor Martin from President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes, PWA adminis trator, indicate that federal funds will be available for financing the new building. While Uncle Sam may give the state 30 percent of the total amount needed as an outright grant the remaining 70 percent would come as a loan and would probably have to be secured by general obligation bonds which w
