Another Vision Realized

IT IS hoped the middle of June will see the last of the rock surfacing placed on the last remaining gap of the Heppner-Spray road, marking completion of the vision of the late Robert J. Carsner, George Bleakman and others who pioneered the work of bringing the road into being.

The occasion is worthy of celebration by Morrow and Wheeler counties as has been suggested by S. E. Notson, district attorney, and mem-bers of the county court. A holiday should be declared with all the folks of the region joining in a picnic at one of the many available spots of beauty along the route.

Attainment of the Heppner-Spray road is another step of civilization in its march westward, aiding in the development of a vast new em-pire destined to be the scene of the world's next great development. Passing through one of the most valuable stands of ponderosa pine timber extant, so far practically untouched, the road promises to bring immediate development to this great resource. It also serves as another avenue of access to the mineral, farming, scenic and sporting treasures of the interior Blue mountains and the John Day valley, at the same time bringing the people of these regions into closer contact with the outside world.

Thus as a route of local importance, the Heppner-Spray road should be fittingly celebrated. But its importance is yet more far-reaching. It serves as a link in a chain of highways to provide a cut-off for interstate travel, and as such should have attention of the federal government in bringing it up to the standard of interstate federally-endowed highways.

The route serves to make a direct connection at Heppner with the Wallula cut-off into western Washington via Umatilla, Butter creek, the Lexington-Jarmon market road and the Oregon-Washington highway, and at Spray with the John Day highway and on into California via the Ochoco and The Dalles-California highways. This is the most direct route between Walla Walla and Bend. It also provides the shortest route between Pendleton and Bend via the Oregon-Washington highway. In celebrating completion of the road at this time, its importance as an interstate highway should not overlooked, and more effort should be expended in getting federal recognition and placement upon the Bureau of Public Roads map

Give Us the Bridge.

THE county court has asked the state highway commission for gift of the old steel bridge removed at the Rugg place on Rhea creek to make way for the new bridge under construction there. The bridge asked for was originally paid for and put in place by Morrow county and the court now has a place to use it elsewhere. The commission, however, has asked the county to pay $100 for it. The $100 presumably would be to compensate the state in a measure for its removal. But the county court cannot see where the state has any use for the structure. and believes the county is entitled to it as a gift. The sum seems a small amount to quibble over. Why not give us the bridge and be done with it?

A Happy Medium.

IT NEVER pays to go to extremes. That's an old axiom which may be applied with profit to all affairs

Right now it may be applied by all classes of people in the industrial world, and especially is it recommended to the laborer.

Eastern Oregon has few labor disputes because employer and employees are, and always have been sympathetic with each other's interests. But the wide open spaces of this section breed a depth of understanding which appears not to be reflected in the more congested districts. Eastern Oregon, however, is interested in labor disputes elsewhere. Those labor disputes cause less demand for our products and result in higher prices for commodities we wust buy.

When men stop working, they stop producing. And when they stop producing, fewer people are permitted the use of their products. In turn those who have stopped producing have nothing with which to purchase the products of those who are still producing, and the products which remain in production accumulate, causing surpluses to depress the market. The cycle works a vicious hardship all along the line and instead of reflecting benefits to the strikers, in the ultimate it is detrimental to them. Labor is entitled to its fruits, and should those fruits be sufficient to provide a living wage, then lated is entitled to a living wage. But if labor's demands exceed the fruits District Clerk. Interest on said warrants ceases May 30, 1935. the industry, and if carried to ex-tremes, actually dry up the life blood on which labor depends for xistence.

There is always a sound economic basis for settling labor disputes. It is always possible to strike a happy medium

Will Rogers helped immortalize 31, 1935. the country editor in "Life Begins at 40," but his unfamiliarity with a printer's stick was evident. One just can't set type holding a stick like that. Will said a mouthful when he opined, "A newspaper should tell the truth—at least sometimes.'

BIGGER 4-H SESSION LOOMS. When the twenty-first annual 4-H club summer school opens on the Oregon State college campus June State Club Leader Seymour expects to welcome close to 1000 boys and girls, or approximately 25 per cent more than last year and white hind feet, roached mane, no making the largest session in history. Every county in Oregon with the posible exception of one is expected to send delegates, he says.

A "bigger and better" program of class work has been prepared for the two-weeks session, and as usual abundant opportunity for sports and recreation will be provided, according to Seymour. rangements have been made for special work on hobbies, including nome craft work for the older girls

PARTY AT IONE.

The mothers and younger brothers and sisters of the first and sec-ond graders of the Ione school were entertained Thursday by Mrs. Lindstrom and her pupils. A picnic followed by a pot luck dinner at noon was the event of the day. Lindstrom has taught two highly successful terms in the Ione school and in token of their appreciation the mothers of her pupils present-ed her with an electric clock.
