and there will not be great attempt at "making" entertainment. "The important fact we wish to impress upon the world is that the road is completed," said Mr. Notson. "We don't want any more people coming to Heppner like the fellow who after arriving from over the road recently, said he kept expecting to run onto dirt road but got clear to Heppner without finding any." Additional improvement of the road was made recently by putting binder into the loose gravel between the head of Chapin creek and head of Haystack canyon, so that the road is now in condition to make good time all the way. Son of Former Residents Drowned at Klamath Falls

Lawrence Aubrey, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Aubrey, former Morrow county residents, was killed by drowning when he fell from the stringers of a bridge over the government reclamation canal at Shasta Way, Klamath Falls, week end before last, according to word received from Mrs. Robert Steers, sister of Mrs. Aubrey and former resident of the Hardman community. The following account was clipped from a Klamath newspaper:

"Lawrence and six other children, ranging in age from 9 to 12 years, were sitting on the stringers under the bridge. They were dangling their feet in the water. "Lawrence, who wore a bathing suit, lost his balance and fell into the canal. He knew how to swim a little, and floundered toward the bank, but he could not make it. "Another youngster leaped in, but he also knew little about swimming and had his hands full saving himself. "A man going across the bridge in a car saw the boy in the canal, officers said, and turned in the alarm. "A search was begun for the body, with sheriff's officers, state police and the city fire department assisting. It was four hours later, about 7:35 p. m., that Chief Keith Ambrose and Officer Jackson of the state police snatched the body and brought it to shore. "Funeral services were conducted from the First Christian church at Klamath Falls, August 14, with Rev. Arthur C. Bates officiating, and interment was in the Linkville cemetery.

Mrs. Aubrey, the mother, nee Miss Lena Baird, was born, reared and married Mr. Aubrey at Heppner, going from here to Astoria where Lawrence, the oldest of four children, was born. The family moved to Klamath Falls about ten years ago. Wayne Baird of this city is a brother of Mrs. Aubrey.

AAA Seeking Permanent Plan for All Regions

Important betterment of western agriculture is hoped for by national AAA leaders and state research specialists to result from regional farm planning now under consideration as the adjustment administration and other divisions of the department of agriculture look ahead to more permanent policies to replace emergency programs. A western states conference at Oregon State college called in August, which was held in connection with the Western Farm Economics association meeting, resulted in the formation of a technical report on desirable regional changes in farming practice and the effect such changes would have on western farm production and income if put into effect. This report, which embodies results of farm management and other research in every state, is being presented at a second or "policy" section of the same conference to be held at Logan, Utah, the last week in August. Gathered there will be highest officials of the agricultural department including national and state leaders of experiment stations and the extension service. AAA officials believe the time has come to look toward regionalizing certain of the agricultural adjustment policies in order to provide for each section of the country leadership in establishing the particular kind of agriculture most profitable for it and which fits best in the national picture. For Oregon, for example, the conference considered plans by which more low producing and high cost wheat land could be taken out of wheat instead of having average type land cut off arbitrarily. Relationship of livestock numbers to future feed supply was also reported on by all states. Oregon was shown to be in a favorable position in this respect. Miss Margaret Brosnan, an attendant at the royal court of Rodeo last year, has arrived from Walla Walla to take in this year's performances. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brosnan of Lena.
