STATE CAPITAL

- Special Session Soon.
- Fair Pays Out.
- School Finances Good. By A. L. LINDBECK

Salem .- It may now be predicted with a reasonable degree of accuracy, that the state legislature will be called into special session some time before the middle of October. Just how much before will depend upon developments connected with the capitol construction program. Federal authorities at the na-tional capital are pounding state officials on the back and demanding action under threat that the PWA grant for the new building will be disapproved unless the state gets busy without unnecessary de-

An amended application, corrected to meet flaws discovered in the Prench who had been working in original document, is even now on Portland came home with them its way to the PWA at Washington. As soon as word is received that the grant is available Governor Martin will issue his call for the gathering of the lawmakers. Already preliminary arrangements for the session are well under way. Plans have been completed for the use of the Marion hotel and the Salem armory as legislative halls, with the senate meeting in the hotel dining room and the House in the armory. Purchase orders have gone in for desks and chairs and the necessary supplies.

In the meantime negotiations are proceeding on a larger site for the new capitol. While Governor Mar-tin has declared, and most emphatically, that the Willamette campus is "out" of the picture, a group of Salem business men, interested in keeping the capitol near the center of the city, are continuing their efforts to secure the campus for state house purposes. The governor has declared his preference for a hill site and has at least two lofty locations in south Salem in mind as ideal sites, either or both of which he may commend to the legieslature for their consideration unless legal obstacles arise which might prevent.

In all of the developments in connection with the proposed new building the governor has taken pains to make it clear that the final decision rests with the legislature. While he expects to have a number of recommendations to make it

The state fair this year was a success from a financial as well as an educational standpoint, according to Solon T. White, state director of agriculture. Receipts of the fair coupled with a share in the racing money, will finance the show without cost to the tax payer, White said. Official figures show that more than 91,000 people paid their way through the turnstiles during the eight days of the fair. Plans for the 1936 fair which will mark the diamond jubilee will be started within a short time with a view to making next year's fair
