Official Paper for Morrow County

It's Only Money That Counts.

WHEN is a resident not a resident? A man who recently moved here from the state of Washington was stopped on the street the other day and asked for his drivers' license.

Thus, it seems, the laws of the state are more concerned with getting the almighty dollar wherever it may be found than with encouraging the state's settlement and development.

What Kind of a Capitol Do You Want?

WHAT do you think about Oregon's new capitol? How much of a building is needed? Where should it be located? How much indebtedness is the state justified in assuming to obtain it?

Certain it is Oregon should have a capitol building, and one that will be a credit to the state. In artistic situation and architectural beauty it should be as perfect as means of the state justify, and it should provide adequate housing facilities for the legislative and administrative departments of state government.

It should be a matter of pride with Oregon people to build substantially and well, incorporating all modern lighting, heating and air conditioning features.

The present capitol site served quite adequately before the old capitol building burned. Should more space within the building be needed it might be more appropriate to build higher instead of wider, for air is much cheaper than land.

Spacious grounds, elaborately landscaped would no doubt add much to the appearance of the state's seat of government, but they would also add much to the yearly cost of upkeep.

4-H Clubbers to Receive Much Cash at Stock Show

Higher prices this year will mean that 4-H club boys and girls from northwest states will probably realize from $20,000 to $25,000 from their fat stock auction sale at the Pacific International Livestock exposition October 5 to 12.

More than 200 baby beef animals from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana will be shown with most of them coming from Oregon counties.

About 100 market lambs and from 300 to 400 head of hogs are also expected from the club boys and girls, bringing the total club livestock exhibits to around 700 animals.

Excellent results from the use of Gazette Times Want Ads are reported to us each week. The cost is small and action comes quickly.

BRUCE BARTON writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Alexander Smith and the Book

Little as the nine mutineers expected that the tiny boat would ever reach England, they determined to take no chances. They shipped on the "Bounty," taking with them six native men, ten women and a girl of fifteen, and sailed away to an island named Pitcairn, after the British officer who fired the first shot at Lexington.

Then ensued what the Encyclopedia Britannica calls "a hell on earth." One of the sailors had worked in a distillery in Scotland, and he discovered a way to distill alcohol from a native plant. Before a great while all the native men were dead, and all the white men but one. That one was Alexander Smith, left alone with a harem of native women and a crowd of half-breed children, his own and his companions'.

Picture him, if you will, the forlorn monarch of a helpless people shut up with his own bitter memories. Then consider the thing which happened. In one of the chests of the sailors he found a book. He read it. He began to ask himself what was to become of this population that had had such a bad start. He began to think with shame and remorse of all the past; he repented of his sins and resolved to live a God-fearing life, and to make good men and women of those children. He began to teach those children to read that book. So years passed. The children grew up and married, and more children were born. The community prospered. Then one day, nearly twenty years later, in 1808, the United States ship Topaz called at this island and brought back the first word which the world had received of the mutineers who escaped the hangman in 1790. Alexander Smith was king and preacher and teacher in that little community. In honor of the President of the United States he had changed his name to John Adams, and he much hoped that only ships from America would visit him, for he had no hankering for the galleons in England. But no British expedition went out after him, and he lived and died in peace.

And now, what about the people on that island? There was no jail. There was no hospital. There was no insane asylum. There was no illiteracy, no crime, no disease. The people had no doctors, took no medicine, used no liquor. The island was one hundred per cent Christian; nowhere on earth were life and property more safe. What changed that place from a hell on earth to a little speck of heaven dropped down in the South Seas? The reading of The Book. The End.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Some Terrible Figures

By courtesy of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association I am in receipt of some statistics with permission to hand a part to my readers for whatever they may be worth.

The cost of venereal diseases to one large city ranges from $2,071,000 to half a million more than that. Annual costs. These diseases, two of them, are a causative factor in many more serious afflictions of mankind and womankind.

The cost of first-year treatments of syphilis is much in excess of sums available for health expenditures in the budgets of working men's families.

From these diseases come hundreds, yea thousands of cases of rheumatism, neuritis, heart disease, and congenital afflictions in the offspring. It is appalling. All from just two so-called "major venereal diseases."

What a world of affliction and suffering. It is the penalty for vicious, lustful appetites. I dare not mention certain of the ultimate loathsome conditions suffered by careless victims of human lust! The picture would be too disgusting.

Isn't it enough to justify warnings, shouted from every house-top? Your physician knows. Ask him for information.

Millions of dollars are paid annually to drug stores for so-called "specifics." There is no way of finding out the actual sums spent. A volume could be written and yet the greater half would remain untold.

One would think a warning such as this would be sufficient.

TODAY and TOMORROW by FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

Squirrels . . . no motor cars

The other day I saw a strange object crossing the road in front of my car. It didn't look like any animal I had ever seen. As I got closer I saw it was a gray squirrel carrying in his mouth an ear of corn larger than he was.

Clearing out the attic in my farm home, I lifted some old boards and found under them hundreds of corn cobs, remains of stores of food which the red squirrels had cached there through successive seasons.

Last Sunday I idled away half a day watching a tiny pine squirrel gathering his winter's food from the big butternut tree near my house. He would run out to the end of each limb, bite off the stems of the butternuts, then scramble down and pick them up out of the grass and hurry away with them, a nut at a time, to some safe storage place.

I marvelled, as I always do, at the sure instinct of the squirrels that impels them to lay in food for winter. But I also reflected that of the wild, work a lot harder for a bare subsistence than most humans have to do. The miracle of man is the intelligence that enables him to gain more than a mere livelihood. No squirrel ever bought a motorcar or saw a movie, no matter how thrifty he and his tribe may be.

Credit . . . in Canada

I shall watch with great interest the "social credit" scheme which the new government of the Province of Alberta, Canada, promises to inaugurate. As I understand it, everybody is to have a credit of $25 a month, guaranteed by the government.

Maybe it will work. At least the plan is gaining friends all through the British Empire. The Dean of Canterbury Cathedral came over from England the other day to help promote the idea.

Less fantastic than our American "Townsend Plan," Alberta's "social credit" is another effort to abolish poverty. Every experiment in that direction will help toward the ultimate solution, if there is one.

I doubt that any plan will work that does not call for productive labor in exchange for "social credit" or any other sort of subsistence benefits. But some way must be found to insure that no one who is willing to work shall go hungry, otherwise civilization will collapse.

Yogis . . . know one?

"What," I asked a Hindu scholar the other day, "is a Yogi? Did you ever know one?"

"I have known only four authentic Yogis, in my fifty years," replied my friend, a former Buddhist priest. "Many fakers pretend to be Yogis, but only those who have yielded to the five disciplines are real Yogis."

A Yogi, he explained, is one who has rid himself, first, of all family ties. That is the first discipline. Then he must abandon all thought of personal comfort, submerge all sex impulses, cease to value money and property, and, last and hardest of all, give up all sense of himself as an individual. Then and then only is he a true Yogi.

To few men is it possible to achieve that utter selflessness, which is, after all, the ideal of all religious teaching.

Thinking . . . the place

"Fishing," said President Cutten of Colgate University the other day, "provides the only real opportunity for modern men to do real thinking undisturbed."

I agree with him. The most thoughtful men I have ever known have nearly all been fishermen. That is not to say, however, that all anglers are thinkers.

Too few of us are really capable of thinking in any real sense. But to those who have problems and worries that seem to defy solution, I know no better way than the relaxation that comes from a day's solitary fishing. Whether one catches a fish or not, there is something about angling that effectively clears the cobwebs from the mind.

Auctions . . . on the farm

I know of no better place to study human nature than at a country auction of farm or household goods. I attended one the other day, and talked with the auctioneer after the sale.

"If you want to sell worthless junk at high prices, or get ridiculously low prices for valuable things, put them up at auction," he said. "You can sell anything at auction at some price." I had to agree with him when I saw a cracked water-pitcher sell for $3 because folks thought it was an "antique," while an almost new bed, springs and mattress fetched only $2!

One thing, though, stood out. Country folks still have money to spend for what they want to buy.

Digging Well for Irrigation

Albany—The well-digging experiment of E. C. Nichols of Lebanon is being watched with interest by farmers of his neighborhood. Mr. Nichols' farm is on prairie land with underground soil of the type that is usually termed "cement gravel." He plans to dig the well to a 40-foot depth. To remove gravel he has rigged up a large bucket which is drawn from the well by a horse and dumped by means of a trip rope operated from down in the well. A slow run-in of water was encountered at the 18-foot level.

Adjusted Acreage Provides Adequate Wheat for Domestic & Export Demand

THIS chart shows how the loss of export markets for wheat has changed the wheat acreage situation in this country. The first column shows that from 1930 to 1932 our farmers averaged 66 million acres planted to wheat, although about 9 million of these acres were producing wheat for which there was no profitable market. The second column shows that 50 million acres usually produce enough wheat for our domestic use and that 7 million acres more will produce all we can export to export. Because of severe crop damage this year, somewhat more than 57 million acres is expected to be planted for the 1935 crop. The figures are based on average yields.

Rex Beach Writes

A close-up study of Rex Beach, noted novelist, whose books have placed him among the leaders of present day writers, has written three stories for the readers of this newspaper. The story "Powder," the first instalment of which appears in this issue, is the first of three. They will be of four instalments each. Read "Powder." We know you will like it.

Smallest Cub of All

CHICAGO . . . Paul Dominick, 14 (above), is mascot of the Chicago Cubs in the National League. Paul and many of the Cubs believe that he was important in the big drive toward the pennant . . . because when the little roly-poly mascot showed up after school, the Cubs started hitting . . . and needed games were won.

"Truth in Meats" Again To Be P. I. L. E. Feature

The annual "Truth-in-Meats" exhibit will again be among the important educational features of the Pacific International Livestock exposition at Portland October 5 and 12, inclusive. It is sponsored by the animal husbandry department of Oregon State college in cooperation with the National Live Stock and Meat board, the Oregon Woolgrowers' association and its women's auxiliary, and the Oregon Cattle and Horse Raisers' association.

The exhibit will include, beef, pork and lamb, and will feature cuts that are economical but "different," as well as a number of new and fancy cuts for "special occasions." Characteristic differences of good and poor quality meats will be shown, as will the location of retail cuts on the animal carcasses. A new refrigeration unit 27 feet long, 8 feet wide and 10 feet high has been provided by the exposition management this year to accommodate the "Truth-in-Meats" exhibit. This will be the tenth year this exhibit has been a part of the P. I. exposition. H. A. Lindgren, extension specialist in animal husbandry at O. S. C., and U. S. Burt, specialist in visual instruction, O. S. C., have been in charge of it from the beginning, and will be assisted this year by A. W. Oliver, assistant professor of animal husbandry at the college.

It is expected that he will land at some southern U. S. port on the Eastern seaboard.
