

TODAY and TOMORROW

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

Food Emergency
The Pilgrims were hard put to it for food, more than once. That is why they established Thanksgiving Day, to celebrate the first year in which they had enough to eat.

The Indians taught them how to get sugar from the maple trees, and how to cook the swamp cranberries. It must have been one of the Pilgrim mothers who first made jelly out of the beach plums that grow so profusely on the sandy shores of Cape Cod Bay.

But I wish I knew who invented that supreme dessert, Rhode Island Pandowdy. I'd try to get his—or her—statue into the Hall of Fame.

Beer Evaporated
One thing the Pilgrims yearned for and couldn't make was beer. They wrote back to their patrons in England, asking them to please send some beer by the next ship.

A tragic-comic episode in history over which I have often smiled, was the fate of that beer, as recorded by Governor Bradford. The beer was shipped, all right—many hogsheads of it. But it was a long and stormy and apparently—thirsty voyage. For when the ship reached Plymouth all the beer barrels were empty.

Not until trade began with the West Indies and rum and molasses began to be imported did the New England settlers get anything they thought fit to drink.

Life Russian Law
I've just been reading the most illuminating book about Russia that I have yet seen. It is Walter Duranty's "I Write As I Please."

What strikes me most forcibly in his revelations is the supreme indifference to life, not only on the part of the ruling minority, who apply the death penalty ruthlessly for any sort of insubordination, but among the Russian people themselves.

Thanksgiving . . . and fixin's
Around this time of the year my New England heritage begins to assert itself. I'd like to sit down again to an old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, with all the relations gathered around the long table, stuffing ourselves with turkey and all the "fixin's"—including, of course, three or four kinds of pie.

Pilgrims and now
I get annoyed at times at people who persist in referring to the Pilgrims of the Plymouth Colony as "Puritans."

ferent sort of folk, religiously and otherwise, from the Pilgrims. They took fewer chances, for one thing. When I think of the courage of the Pilgrims and the gallant fight they made against almost overwhelming odds, I wonder how much of that spirit of independence still persists.

M-m-m! Turkey Dressing! Here's How to Make It

Whether the piece-de-resistance for Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner is to be a turkey, goose, duck, or a nice fat hen of capon, the stuffing that goes inside it when it is roasted is of the greatest importance to the final success of the feast.

Foundation Recipe for Dressing or Stuffing:

- 3 cups diced or stale bread crumbs
3-4 cup of fat (turkey fat or butter)
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon pepper
3 teaspoons poultry-seasoning
1 tablespoon minced parsley
2 tablespoons minced onion
1-4 cup minced celery

- 1. Use two cups of whole wheat bread crumbs instead of three cups of white bread, and add 2 cups of coarsely chopped walnut meats.
2. For an oyster dressing, add 2 cups of drained oysters to the foundation recipe, moisten with the oyster liquor, and decrease the poultry seasoning 1 teaspoon.
3. For prune dressing, which is especially good with roast duck or goose, use the foundation recipe, decreasing the amount of butter or fat one-half. Add 1 cup of prunes which have been softened by soaking, pitted and cut in small pieces.

Oregon's Economic Work Praised at Washington

Oregon's accomplishments in holding farm outlook conferences and in carrying on the Bang's disease control program are being highly praised in the national capital among those in touch with this work throughout the country.

Local committee work is now in progress in 23 counties of Oregon in preparation for the new series of county farm outlook conferences scheduled for early in the new year.

The conferences themselves will be but part of a comprehensive program of which they are the climax, Teutsch explains. At present a careful fact-finding analysis of the condition of agriculture in each county is being carried on.

Nationally the movement is being hailed as another progressive step in economic education which will be an important factor in achieving a more balanced and prosperous agricultural industry.

Annual "Post Farm" Test Shows Treatment Value

The eighth year of observation and testing on a "post farm" of various woods used in fencing has been made by the school of forestry at Oregon State college, confirming earlier results as to good and bad types of treatment for posts.

The most surprising new development is the failure of six out of 25 incense cedar posts in only six years. While this is not the western red cedar more commonly used in fencing, it is a wood frequently used in southwestern Oregon, where it has been generally credited with around 20 years of life.

Biggest, Tallest Trees Named by OSC Forester
The largest tree in the world is the famous General Sherman tree, a redwood in Sequoia National park, which contains 600,120 board feet, says T. J. Starker of Oregon State college of forestry, in recently published articles on "Giant Growers of the Globe." The tallest tree in the world, so far as known, is another redwood of different species in northern California, which is 364 feet high.

SERA Workers Get Lower Truck Fees

Sixty-seven owners of light trucks were enabled to obtain jobs with SERA units in Oregon this year as a result of legislation enacted at the 1935 session of the legislature, according to records in the office of Secretary of State Earl Snell.

Under the 1935 law, SERA workers with motor trucks of two cubic yards or less capacity are permitted to license such vehicles for a yearly fee of $5.00, instead of on a weight basis.
