Headwork vs. Happenstance.

THE New Dealers undertook a difficult task when they attempted to make over the country in a few short years. It was obvious, even se who directed its destinies, to th that the mushroom growth of nu-merous agencies and untried activities necessary to such an attempt would contain many weeds. The weeds are glaringly conspicuous. Yet, behind the New Deal idea is a germ to be nurtured and cultivati. That germ is "planning." Where the New Dealers failed was where they attempted to go ahead without plans being well laid. That fact is apparent to President Roosevelt and his staff of New Deal engineers as attested by their more to attend. recent stress on planning; by their agitation for more and more activity by state and county planning boards.

Morrow county should get on the band wagon with such a planning Saturday morning where she will board. The set-up is provided for by state statute, and there is need New Deal faith.

In our individual businesses we keep record of our assets and lia-blities. We attempt to know the production possibilities of our in-vestment, what is required each business visitors in Pendleton Satyear for repair and replacements, urday. and whether additional capital investment will pay increased dividends. As business has become more and more highly competitive, it has become ever more necessary to make our pencils sharper. We have learned, or are destined to learn if we stay in business, that planning is essential to the success of individual business.

Why should not the same business acumen be applied to the public's or everybody's business? It is apparently the course of wisdom.

Just now Heppner is interested in obtaining a storage dam on upper Willow creek to augment the city water supply. From the nature of things, it is logical to assume that staying the flow of water in the wet season would shorten the dry season, thereby benefitting not only Heppner but other territory served by the Willow creek watershed. water table of the entire Willow creek valley and thereby adding to its productivity.

But what basis is there on which to proceed other than pure assumption? There is need for much in formation such as planning boards are expected to obtain in order that such a project may be intelligent-ly carried out. It should be determined what the valley produces under existing circumstances, the possible amount of water which might be retained, and the amount of retention practicable consistent with storage possibilities and cost of retention compared with production benefits. In other words, it should be known how much dam, if any, will pay its way; and it should be determined that benefits will be sufficient to repay the investment on a sound amortization basis.

The theory of planning boards is to provide a balance sheet of the assets and liabilities of the district they represent, and in the light thereof to show how much might be spent practicably by way of capital investment for permanent improvements.

F. F. Wehmeyer, local forest ranger, suggests that as the new state capitol building will belong to all of us, why wouldn't it be a good idea for each county to send a building stone, quarried within the county and properly designated by name, to be placed in the founda tion of the new building.

BOARDMAN By RACHEL J. BARLOW

A large crowd attended the Ladies Aid bazaar at the church base ment Saturday evening. A lovely dinner was served after which th various booths were opened, which all brought in a good amount of money for the organization. At eight-thirty o'clock a Hokus Pokus program was given in the church which was a comedy and greatly enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Waite of Troutdale spent the week end in Boardman. On Friday evening they were guests at the S. C. Russell home and no Saturday night at the Ray Brown home. They visited with a great number of friends while here.

Willard Baker spent the week end Grande and Baker. His in La grandfather Baker returned to Boardman with him for a visit at the W. A. Baker home. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Johnson spent

To Mary darling In Too big for your stoching but I know it's what you want AN ELECTRIC RANGE

Have you told your 'Santa' how much work and worry electric cookery would save you?

 Are you still grubbing along cooking by some antiquated, inconvenient method? Then you should give your "Santa" immediate notice that you want an electric range for Christmas. And if yours is a really considerate husband, he will do his best to see that your wish comes true.

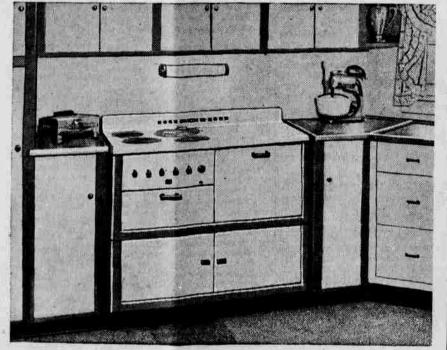

When you have an electric range, a turn of a switch gives you clean, glowing, intense heat that starts food cooking at once. Without any effort, you always have all the fuel you need.

Your oven will stay constantly at any temperature you wish due to the vigilance of the oven heat control.

You pans never become blackened. Only a swish of a damp cloth is needed to keep the porcelain enamel finish of an electric range gleaming and immaculate.

You have less food shrinkage. And even cheaper foods become tender and delicious because waterless cookery is so easy with an electric range.

Don't think that you can't afford the convenience of electric cookery. Domestic electric rates are low. Electric ranges are very reasonably priced, and they are offered on convenient terms. Visit any dealer's or our nearest office today. Let us prove that electric cooking is economical cooking.
