Schoenfeld Urges Use of Wild Life as Farm Crop

Washington, D. C.-Wild life and agriculture on both public and pri- from a severe cold. vate lands are inseparable by na-ture and should be conducted in harmony for their mutual benefit, Dean William A. Schoenfeld of Oregon State college told the Na-tional Wild Life conference in an address here on "Wild Life as an Agricultural Resource."

The problems of agriculture must be fully realized by those administering the wild life resources if game and fish management are to be effective," Dean Schoenfeld pointd out. "Furthermore, if wild life is to be produced jointly with the various forms of agriculture, urday as the guests of John Mcit is important that game production through management be approached in the same spirit and by similar methods as are applied to other phases of agriculture."

Dean Schoenfeld called attention to progress already being made in Oregon in showing the possibilities of keeping or making wild life a definite agricultural enterprise of the mamps.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Batty and Mary Bethki were visiting here Saturday. Mrs. Thomas McEntyre went to Johnson that such practice has resulted in increased yields of wild which will bring monetary returns is in the hospital there. to the farmer. Farmers are not expecting to get rich by promoting wild life conservation, he said, but they are perfectly willing to join in movement for the general good if they are not expected to bear all the expense and get little or no return.

A normal crop of game in no way interferes with the range livestock industry if both are properly han-dled, Dean Schoenfeld continued. He pointed to the happy condition obtaining in the Izee mule deer territory in eastern Oregon where the land has been under private control for many years and where the catextent. Today the cattlemen in that community, he said, are not only harvesting a crop of livestock but are also reaping a crop of game which they unconsciously harbored while protecting their private land.

Oregon dean urged that feed is available for both winter and summer use so that surrounding farmers will not be forced to supply winter feed for the increasing numbers of wild animals in the protected areas.
