

Local Happenings

Orville Cutsforth, in the city yesterday, said the grain was beginning to show green on many of the blow spots on his large farming operations in the Lexington vicinity. While the grain had been thinned, he believed the weeds had been thoroughly killed, thus lending verity to the adage that it is an ill wind indeed that brings naught of good. Further evidence that the wind was not all bad was cited in the instance of the Lundell creek farm near Ione. Large deposits of silt, left by the earlier flood waters, had covered up the alfalfa, and the wind came along to move the silt on and leaving the field in good condition again.

Walter Rietmann, in the city Monday from the Ione section, estimated that 500 acres of his place had been blown out in storms recently. Almost continuous rain for several days, which covered things inside the house as well as outside, made living conditions extremely disagreeable. Actual hardship was encountered when one was at work in the field and a blow started, he said. He hoped the growing grain would assist in keeping the blows down. He believed one cure for the blows lies in cutting up the larger fields and leaving strips of stubble to help hold them in bounds.

Bert Johnson, in the city Tuesday from Ione, was one of the heavier sufferers from recent blows as his farm home was almost covered up by the shifting dirt. In the early days of the blow, he tunneled into the house one night to sleep in his bed. The next night he didn't have the heart to wade through it, so he called at the home of Ralph Akers, a neighbor. Finding no one there, he helped himself to a bed. Since then he has been busy digging out from under. The dirt still shifts whenever the wind blows, Bert says, and prospects are not very bright.

Three leading lady democrats of Umatilla county were calling on members of the faith in this city Friday. They were Eva Nelson, candidate for delegate to the national convention from the second district Mrs. Mike Estes, vice president of Umatilla young democrats, and Mrs. Tom Keating, chairman of the Umatilla democratic central committee. Among other things they were drumming up interest in the big democratic rally being held in Pendleton today.

Announcement has been received here of the birth of a 7½ pound son to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bucknum at their home in Los Angeles last week. Mrs. E. L. Bucknum, grandmother, of this city, is visiting at the Bucknum home in Los Angeles.

Harry L. Duval was in town on Monday from the Bell ranch at Blackhorse. While considerable dirt from the lower country blew over that way, Mr. Duval said that the Blackhorse country was staying pretty well put.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Curry of Portland were guests at the Fred Lucas home the first of the week. Mrs. Curry is the youngest sister of Mr. Lucas, and Mr. Curry is manager of the Ground Gripper shoe store in the city.

C. J. D. Bauman, P. M. Gemmell, Mr. and Mrs. Vawter Parker made a round trip by motor to Portland Tuesday. The gentlemen attended the 76th convocation of Royal Arch Masons for Oregon.

W. H. Dutton, former Heppnerite who has been spending some time at the Joe Hayes farm home near Lonerock, visited in the city for several days this week, checking up on old time friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gorgor were visitors in town Tuesday from the farm home in the north Ione section, where blows of the last week have made living conditions quite disagreeable.

W. T. Craig was transacting business in the city Friday from the farm north of Lexington. He reported crop prospects quite good on his place.

Snow Surveys Big Help In Irrigation Planning

Irrigation farmers of Oregon will have more information available this year on prospective water supplies than ever before, as a result of the beginning of cooperative snow survey work being conducted in the major irrigation sections of the state. Snow in the mountains constitutes a vast surface reservoir, or as some have termed it, "frozen assets," but lack of accurate information in the past have prevented detailed forecasts as to the water supplies available at any particular season.

The division of irrigation of the federal bureau of agricultural engineering has now been made responsible for snow surveys throughout the western country, and in Oregon is working in close cooperation with C. E. Stricklin, state engineer, and the Oregon State college experiment station. A series of district meetings to report on prospective water supplies for this year has just been held at Medford, Bend, Pendleton and Ontario. In charge of these meetings have been J. H. Ryan, assistant state engineer, who has developed valuable records in some localities in the past seven years; M. R. Lewis, irrigation engineer of the state college teaching staff, and R. A. Work, associate irrigation engineer and superintendent of the Medford branch station.

In all instances reported on, irrigation water supplies are expected to be equal or better than last year. In some instances they are the best since the start of the dry cycle. In the Medford area, snow measurements in the Cascade range indicate a total water supply adequate to produce all crops. Soils are now well soaked. In the Upper Klamath basin, snow supplies are some 18 per cent greater than last year. In the Deschutes river valley there is the greatest amount of water in storage in the Ochoco reservoir since 1932 and an increase of about 80 per cent over last year. Snow depth and water content in the headwaters of the Deschutes are about the same as last year, though underground storage is believed to be improved. Cultivated lands in the region are in excellent condition as to moisture.

SPRING GARDEN TIPS

By A. G. B. BOUQUET, O. S. C.

A boy of 12 in one of the counties of western Oregon is making his spending money growing parsley which he sells to butcher shops, hotels, and restaurants. There is a steady demand for this green garnish and the crop is one that is produced over a long season.

Spring set cauliflower plants often run to seed prematurely before making a normal foliage growth because the plants are checked by cool temperatures and insufficient nitrification of the soil. Plants set out in the summer for the fall crop rarely show this fault.

Strains of varieties of tomatoes sometimes show variations so that when one has chosen a variety there yet remains the question of the breeding and selection back of the strain. The standard varieties most widely planted in Oregon include Bonny Best, John Baer, Chalk's Jewel and Pritchard. Others used to a lesser extent are Earline, Perfection, Marglobe and Indiana Baltimore—the last being a canning variety in southern Oregon.

New hybrid strains of sweet corn such as Golden Cross Bantam, the most important sweet corn introduction since Golden Bantam was introduced in 1902, are arousing interest among commercial growers. These hybrid strains have a greater uniformity of ear characteristics and size, a higher degree of uniformity as to stage of maturity and yield more heavily because of this uniformity. They also have a smaller percentage of nubbins ears. The season of Golden Cross Bantam is about 8-10 days later than Golden Bantam. A number of early hybrids are being developed.

The State Band Contest

The Heppner school band returned home Sunday with the D class championship cup won at the state band contest at Corvallis. The Heppner band under direction of Harold W. Buhman completely outclassed the eight bands with whom they competed. They won first, being judged superior the Santa Clara band won second, being judged excellent. The Burns band which was champion for the two previous years was dethroned, placing third. Much credit is due to Harold Buhman who kept the home band in almost perfect time. The band was also commended on its quality of tone. This is the second year the Heppner school band has competed. The winners of A, B, and C classes were Jefferson, West Linn and University high of Eugene, in the order named.

The band wishes to thank those who furnished the transportation for the trip to Corvallis.

Show Presented

Monday afternoon at three o'clock the Heppner school had the pleasure of seeing an R. C. A. Vitaphone picture shown in the high school assembly. There were two shows, one a Walt Disney cartoon, "The Haunted Ship," and the other "The Cougar." The latter was the thrilling adventures of J. C. Bruce in his capture of wild animals. Both pictures were very interesting and "The Cougar" was very educational. Students who attended the shows were charged 10c admission. All proceeds above a very nominal guarantee were placed in the student body treasury.

Senior Memory Book

The annual year book has been changed to the Senior Memory Book. This book consists of only two pages. The pictures of all the different groups are to be on one page and the pictures of the graduating seniors on the opposite page. The organization of the book is decidedly different than the one put out last year. Last year's book consisted of all the group pictures with information about each group underneath the picture. The book this year gives just the name under the picture. It is not as expensive or half as much trouble as the "Shamrock" was when it was put out last year. Although the year book this year is smaller in comparison with the work and price, it is a desirable book to have.

Inland Empire Teachers' Meeting
Outstanding speakers at the Inland Empire Teachers' meeting were Cameron Beck, personnel director of the New York Stock exchange; Dr. Lee Paul Sieg, president of the University of Washington, and Dr. Burton, professor of education at the University of Southern California.

Mr. Beck stated that he has employed about 2500 high school graduates. Practically every boy who secures a position must be interviewed by him. He stated that teachers have a tremendous responsibility in the development of character, personality and efficiency in young people.
