Morrow County Loses.

In another column is printed a communication to the editor from a Lone Rock resident calling attention to the deplorable condition of what is commonly known here as the Heppner-Condor road. Because of the road being in ill repair, says the communicant, all contact with Heppner has been severed. It is asked that a "cat" be put to work to dig out a real road.

The Condor road has long had the attention of the county court and action on the part of that body was several times thwarted by demand of more populous districts that the money be spent elsewhere. It has been a hard job for the court to keep up with the demand for roads with the money available the last few years, and it should not be unduly criticized for not doing more for the Condor road. The court has expressed itself favorably on this road and will act when money is available.

Morrow county realizes that it is losing by not having the Condor road in better shape. It is an important artery and will not be forgotten.

WANTS ROAD FIXED.

To the Editor:

I just wonder if there is a road in Morrow county that has been put in the discard as has the Lone Rock road—the road from the ridge near Eight Mile P. O. down through Harshman's thence up Rock creek to Buttermill canyon? At present the road from the Gilliam county line to the ridge is almost impassable when dry, and after a rain means a 165 mile trip unless you want to take chances on going to the bottom of the canyon. The distance over this road to Heppner from the Gilliam county line would be about 30 miles—possibly 12 miles of bad road. As the road has been neglected for years, with just a few rocks raked and a scratching on the Harshman hill, it is now very dangerous. There are culverts broken, high centers, cave-ins, slides, loose rocks, badger holes, and very sidling and narrow places. Many complaints have been made, consequently all wool and freight ceased to come to Heppner any more. We would like the "cat" to dig out a road. It would take care of itself again for the next 20 years perhaps, and believe the people in this vicinity are entitled to the work. Due to these conditions all contact with Heppner has been severed.

OSC Unmasks Habits of Strawberry Root Pests

Strawberry root weevils, those insidious pests of one of Oregon's most valuable berry crops, have long been the subject of intensive research by the entomologists of the Oregon State college experiment station. After hunting down the weevils in their hiding places, cataloging the six species found to be active in Oregon, and learning all about their life habits, the entomologists have now published the results of their research in the form of two bulletins just off the press.

Of chief current interest to Oregon growers is a brief illustrated bulletin designated as Station Circular 115, "Strawberry Root-Weevil Control in Oregon," by Dr. Don C. Mote. It explains the method of mixing and applying the poison baits which have been found most practical in the control of these pests.

The time of application for the most common species in most parts of Oregon is about the middle of the harvest season, the exact time depending on local conditions. In some sections two applications are necessary for the control of the common weevil—the first one coming about the middle of May or when the berries are in full bloom.

Bait for the native species, which include the decorated, Lacombe and western strawberry root weevils, is applied earlier, usually about April 1 when the adults are actively feeding on foliage.

The comprehensive results of the research have been published in the form of a 110-page station bulletin No. 330, entitled, "The Root-Weevil Injurious to Strawberries in Oregon," by J. Wilcox, Don C. Mote and Leroy Childs. This is believed to be the most complete report on the subject now in print, and contains, in addition to the reports on the extensive research carried on in Oregon, a bibliography of 225 references to other published material on these pests.

Cultural practices have been an important aid in the control of the pests, although in recent years the use of poison baits of two types, one using apple waste and the other bran as a base, have become the standard method of control.

Ewes Wintered on Range, Barley Lakeview

Johnson.
