Keeping Down the Flies.

BATTLE should be waged on the common house fly before warm weather and the real breeding season begins, advises the state board of health. There is no more dangerous enemy to health than this carrier of disease, and cooperation by everyone in wlaying this public enemy No. 1 should be given wholeheartedly, for there is no telling where the insect may get in its deadly work.

New OSC Catalog Issued

Showing Many Offerings. Corvallis—The new catalog for Oregon State college, a 400-page volume listing all the offerings for the year 1936-37, is off the press, having been issued well in advance of the close of college this year, considerably earlier than usual. The catalog, while confined primarily to the state college, also carries a forward description of the state system of higher education as a whole and contains a large chart showing at a glance the offerings of all institutions in the system. The catalog lists under liberal arts and sciences at O. S. C., lower division work, and major curricula in the school of science. Under major professional and technical curricula it lists the schools of agriculture, education, engineering and industrial arts, forestry, home economics, pharmacy and the degrading department of secretarial science.
