Stop! Look! Listen!

AT 4:30 P. M., July 9th, an automobile, apparently under speed control, was approaching highway crossing in a city. Engineer of ap-proaching streamliner train, believing driver would stop, sounded warning signal, and although driver appeared to observe the train, he drove onto crossing, and rear of automobile was struck and demolished. Driver fortunately escaped injury.

At 9:10 A. M., July 16th, an automobile, moving at a slow rate of speed, approached a crossing in a town. Enginer of streamliner train saw automobile, but was so certain the driver would stop before reaching the crossing he did not decrease speed, although he sounded warning signal. Driver appeared to apply brakes, but ran onto crossing in front of train and was struck. Driver and passenger sustained superficial injuries.

At 8:03 A. M., July 25th, an automobile was seen by engineer of streamliner train approaching crossing where view was somewhat obstructed by buildings. He immediately applied brakes and sounded diately applied brakes and sounded warning signals, and had train nearly at a stop when automobile drove onto crossing, was struck and demolished. At 5:06 P. M., July 27th, an auto-mobile stalled on road crossing in a town. Driver attempted to push car off the rails, but was unable to do so before being struck by streamliner train. Engineer unable to bring his train to a complete stop after getting close enough to see that automobile was on track. A woman occupant of the automo-ble was seriously injured.

A woman occupant of the automo-bile was seriously injured. Streamliner trains move at a high rate of speed, frequently 100 feet or more per second. In each of the above incidents the driver of the car may have underestimated the speed of the streamliner train. The railtoad is making every ef-fort to avoid crossing accidents, ex-hausting every means to do so. Every citizen along our line can materially aid in this by themselves remembering and bringing notice of their friends to the short time consumed between the time train is seen approaching and time train the sen approaching and time train
