When It's Fair Time-

OUITE a few Morrow County peo-Uple last week end tasted enough of the feeling Will Rogers exper-ienced when he took his prize sow to the state fair to want a real oldtime county fair back again. There were the 4-H boys' and girls' exhibits at the pavilion which showed, according to Dr. Nelson, judge, a hundred percent improve ment in quailty of the sheep exhib-its over last year, and which gave evidence of progress in other de partments. Then there was the the Woolgrowers Auxiliary exhibit of woolen articles which brought high words of praise from any specia-tors as well as throbs of pride to the breasts of exhibitors. Again in-terest was stmulated among wheat growers in securing cleaner seed, and woolgrowers were made to think a little more about the quality of their wool.

So it is when the fall of the year rolls around and there is a breathing spell after the arduous harvest season and before the work of autumn planting commences. Ev-eryone takes time to review the efforts of his year's work and to con-sider ways of making the coming year's efforts a little more produc tive. The county fair fits into the picture by giving neighbors an op portunity to compare notes while viewing what the other fellow has done, each having his vision and incentive broadened thereby. Good amusement features fit into the picture also, for they assist in the re-laxation process, helping all to forget something of worries of the past and to view the future with a brighter vision.

No admirer of livestock viewed the Rodeo parade Friday who did not admire the purebred Hereford displayed by Roy Robinson. One could imagine that Roy had much the same feeling as Mr. Rogers evidenced in the screen classic on disdenced in the screen classic on dis-playing his prize porker. There is justly a pride to be feit in owning something a little better than the other fellows, and Roy like many others has learned that it pays to raise the best animal possible.

Therein lies the virtue of a county fair which, it is hoped, will not be long in returning, full fledged, to Morrow county.
