Of even greater importance is the culture of the soul. Be as concerned about attending Bible school and church services. They are growing increasingly interesting every Sunday.

CAPTAIN DANCEY

lin D. Roosevelt, with being the brains behind the scenes at Washington, and cited Tugwell as saying that on return of the New Deal to Washington the new order will make the old New Deal look like a piker.

The fighting Irish journalist pictured the United States as at the gravest crisis in history, saying that with the supreme court the only bulwark left between free democracy and dictatorship, the fact of its being loaded with politicians to nullify its functioning is imminent. The American people have already witnessed the legislative branch of government made a rubber stamp by the executive.

Captain Dancey paid tribute to the man London, who as governor of Kansas has balanced the state's budget and lowered the taxes in that state. Offered as comparison was the record of Roosevelt as governor of New York who assumed office when the state had a surplus of $100,000,000, and who left office with the state owing $800,000,000.

The Kansas governor promises a return to honesty in government. Far from being a friend of monopoly, he has fought it at every turn of the road as his record as governor determines. He has declared against further devaluation of the currency, and in favor of a currency based on something. He will ask and expect a dollar's worth of value for every government dollar spent. In fact he will apply common honesty and horse sense to the conduct of the government's business the same as he has to his own and to that of the state of Kansas.

Captain Dancey was a friend of the late Will Rogers. He quoted two remarks of Will's. One referred to the New Deal brain trust. He said what this country needs is less doctoring and more horse sense. The other, made in the 1932 campaign, was that whoever is elected there will be a change in four years. The speaker, who had just completed a tour of eastern states, having addressed a large audience in Cleveland with several members of the Taft family in attendance, said that the change is on space in the east. Oregon is just beginning to feel it.

Elbert Bede Finds People Opposed to Power Bill

"That part of Oregon east of the mountains, with its vast open spaces, is deeply interested in the possible effects of the state power bill that will be on the November ballot," said Elbert Bede, Cottage Grove, who was here last Thursday. "One reason eastern Oregon is concerned," said Mr. Bede, "is because it seems to the layman that the expense of distributing power in such a vast country would be far greater than any hope for income. Running a transmission line for 50 or 100 miles for a customer or two would mean deficit that would have to be carried by users in thickly settled centers or borne by the general taxpayer."
