Louis Byham of Pennsylvania and his friend, Pat Tagner of Missouri, are visiting at the J. A. Troedson ranch. Mr. Byham is a nephew of Mrs. Troedson and the young men are making a tour of the west.

Mr. and Mrs. Ture Peterson drove to Astoria Saturday. Mr. Peterson returned Sunday and Mrs. Peterson remained for a longer visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spittle.

It has been decided by the committee in charge to have the benefit tea for the library on Sept. 26, instead of Sept. 19 as was first announced. The tea will be given by the Women's Topic club at the I. O. O. F. hall on the afternoon of that date. The club appreciates the support the community has given to the library project and will be grateful for the benefit derived from the tea.

Since the starting of the library last fall hundreds of books have been loaned to the reading public. Many individuals have given or loaned books to the library and books from the Umatilla county and state libraries have been loaned to it. A small rental library of the more recent books has been added to the shelves by members of the Women's Topic club. Altogether the project has been very successful and well worth the support of the public.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Timm are moving their household goods to their new location near Pendleton. Last Friday Mrs. Timm took her son, Melvin, over so that he could enroll in school. Since there is no school in the district where they will live, he will attend the Pendleton school.

founded on years of study both in school work and as an attorney and was filled with information concerning the constitution. It was spiced with anecdotes of experiences at American Bar association conventions and other experiences of which he had personal knowledge. An incident of the general ignorance which prevails concerning the document, he said, was evidenced by a statement he heard a man make recently in which Thomas Jefferson was attributed the honor of writing the constitution. Thomas Jefferson wrote the declaration of independence and not the constitution, he corrected.

socialism. "If that is the case," said an American correspondent to me who has been in Germany for a long time, "they must be good and sick of their bargain." Any American business man who believes in rugged individualism and is flirting with the idea of fascism as a means of preserving his power to run his own business as he chooses, had better think twice, if German and Italian experience is any criterion. To appoint a dictator with the idea of controlling him after he gets power in his hands is a fool notion. Once in power, a dictator begins to dictate. The principal thing he needs is money, and he gets the money where the money is—out of the hands of those who have it. He doesn't even ask for it; he takes it. It is like America during the war-time drives, only far more so. The controlling element knows through the banks and in other ways just how much everybody has, and in one way or other (and there are lots of ways) makes him contribute about what it thinks he ought to in order to help the government make a showing.

He may have to put in a swimming pool or a sport field of a little theater for employees, he may have to contribute heavily to some worthy public movement, but mostly he has to exchange his hard earned money for short-time government paper. Then, of course, with his strong box filled with these notes and bonds, he is anxious to see that the existing government is not overturned, even though the same government interferes in his business every day of his life, telling him what he can do and what he must not.

The Germans are taught that all this is far better than what they seemed to be getting into in 1932 before Hitler seized power. The kitchen doors still have the heavy year in college, will open September 21 at O. S. C., with prospects of one of the largest beginning classes in the history of the institution. Dormitories and sororities and other living accommodations have been made ready for occupancy Saturday, September 19.

This is the thirteenth consecutive freshman week program since O. S. C. pioneered in this plan of starting new students out with an intelligently planned boost, rather than a haphazard catch-as-catch-can idea. As usual, this will not be a "rushing" week for fraternities and sororities, but will be devoted exclusively to a definite program of guidance lectures and conferences, and placement tests to see that students enter the classes that will do them the most good.

For students who are still in doubt as to the field of work in which they should register, there will be three special conference hours at which competent advisers will answer questions and give other vocational assistance. In addition, each entering student is assigned to a faculty adviser for the entire week, whose duty it is to render all assistance possible in this and other matters.

A total of 11,938 persons were enrolled in vocational education classes in Oregon last year according to O. D. Adams, state director. This represents an increase of 65 percent over the previous year's enrollment. Classes are offered in 126 different occupations. Adams points out Courses in agriculture attracted 2507 students, home economics courses enrolled 3895 and trade and industrial education classes enrolled 5536, representing the largest gain.

A total of 104,839 out-of-state automobiles visited Oregon during the first eight months of this year, according to registration figures released by Secretary of State Snell. This is 4500 in excess of the registrations for the entire 12 months of 1935, indicating a substantial increase in tourist traffic through the Pacific northwest.

The Oregon state fair's "diamond jubilee" attracted the largest attendance since the pre-depression days of 1928, more than 80,000 persons paying their way in during the week. Financially, also, the fair was a success, according to Solon T. White, director, who declares that for the first time in many years the races and the night horse show more than paid their way.

NO TRESPASSING or hunting will be permitted on the Dee Cox and D. O. Justus land in Morrow county. Anyone found trespassing or hunting will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.
