Most recent pictures of Democratic and Republican Presidential candidates with their wives as they turned their faces toward home voting booths to cast their ballots in the national election, next Tuesday.

Contrast Between Switzerland and Italy Depicted by Dean

(Editor's Note: This is one of several articles written for this newspaper by Eric W. Allen, dean of the University of Oregon school of journalism who traveled in Europe on a fellowship granted by the Oberlander Trust of the Karl Shurz memorial foundation.)

By ERIC W. ALLEN, Dean of the University of Oregon School of Journalism.

MEIRINGEN, Switzerland.—Every American ought to have the experience we have just had, of passing from a land of whispers and spies into a country of ancient and unquestioned freedom.

In the early days in the west a certain kind of whiskey was said to be capable of making a rabbit spit in a bulldog's face, and similarly it was interesting to notice that a somewhat extended stay in the unfree land of Italy made the wickedly effective defenses with which the Swiss have adorned the St. Gotthard pass look mighty good to the pacifist in our party.

A great deal of hokum has been written about Mussolini. Well-made hokum is nothing but the truth seen a little out of focus and with a false emphasis. The hasty American tourist is, the writer is inclined to believe, a far from shrewd observer.

The writer was in Italy in 1923, before fascism could have had any particular effect and while conversation was still rather free, again in 1927 and again now. The changes for the better in fourteen years have been considerable, but they did not seem to the writer to be essentially different from the improvements fourteen years have brought in Oregon and other American states.

When one controls a press, one is in a condition to claim credit for everything. Did Mussolini build all these roads? All European roads are lined with trees and on most of these good roads in Italy the bordering trees are far older than fascism.

These types of recklessness are dangerous, perhaps more dangerous than the careless operation of a motor vehicle. Lack of driving experience, or inattentive driving—though both are to be condemned—do not usually necessitate an accident unless some other agency is involved.

Historically, the Italians have been one of the greatest peoples the world has produced. They invented modern banking, they started the recivilization of the world after the dark ages.

Weather conditions are often blamed for many accidents, but in most cases of this type, a thorough diagnosis of the circumstances usually reveal that carelessness on the part of the driver was the actual cause.

I believe it the duty of the Grange as an organization of community service to do all in its power toward promoting general safety throughout the highways of the United States through education, legislation, and cooperation.

Whereas, there is a vacancy in our Chapter and in the homes of his loved ones, that will never more be filled; Be it resolved, that Ruth Chapter extends its sympathy to his family and relatives in their hour of bereavement, and records its sorrow in the loss of a brother.

And, be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family, and copies be given the local newspaper for publication, and spread upon the minutes of our Chapter.

They conserve their streams and mountains which become year by year more lovely, less subject to erosion, and more productive of the electric power that turns the wheels and makes Switzerland brilliant by night. This fills with paying guests—and in Switzerland it is the tourist that pays and pays; prices are high—this fills with paying guests the best hotels in the world which their highly intelligent and educated people know so well how to construct and manage.

to restrain from imbibing very long at a time, therefore, I believe these dangerous drivers should be placed directly in the hands of the government, and that it should be done before they have wrought havoc trying to mix liquor and gasoline.
