

New AAA Program Ready for Work

With final approval of rates for Oregon's soil building practices and other details of the 1937 agricultural conservation program, preliminary organization work is moving ahead rapidly for getting the plan into the hands of growers at the earliest possible date, according to F. L. Ballard, in charge of the extension service at Oregon State college. If present plans are carried through, actual work of collecting new work sheets in the counties will begin early in February, officials believe.

C. C. Conser, assistant to George E. Farrell, director of the western division, arrived in Oregon soon after the approval of the program to confer with state committeemen and members of the technical committee and the extension service staff at Corvallis on interpretation and application of new features of this year's program. Before doing this, however, he was taken on a tour of inspection of recently reseeded burnt-over lands in southwestern Oregon, so he would have first hand information on what is expected to be an important factor of the new soil conservation work in this state.

As soon as the state conference was completed, representatives of the state committee and the extension service embarked on a series of six regional meetings at Portland, Corvallis, Redmond, Arlington and Baker for county agents and county committeemen. After attending these, the county leaders of the program will be in a position to start the actual work with growers.

Work sheets are to be obtained this year for every farm in the county, regardless of whether cooperation with the program is contemplated. After the work sheets are in, soil depleting and soil conserving bases and a productivity index will be worked out for each farm. From these the local committeemen will be able to work out a tentative outline of possible returns from participation, and from this each individual farmer will be able to determine whether or not he wishes to cooperate under the program.

The Oregon dockets reveal that the program this year puts considerably more emphasis on soil building practices, with a larger portion of the payments allocated to this type of work, as compared with last year when it was a minor consideration compared with the diversion program. More Oregon farmers will be able to profit by the cooperation this year than formerly, extension officials believe.

Henry Smouse was a business visitor in the city Monday from the farm north of Ione.

"The importance of Sunday-school cannot be over-stated. If the church did nothing else but conduct this great character-forming school its existence would be fully justified. Secular schools and colleges take pride in their famous alumni. What a list of alumni the Sunday-school has! It includes almost every leader in our national life."

Argentine Wheat Depresses Market

Wheat shipments from Argentine are rapidly undermining world prices. Top grades of milling wheat which one reached $1.37 are now around $1.14 and local Oregon wheat which once climbed to $1.19 is now around $1.09.

Potato prices continue at new levels with the demand strong and brokers taking on large stocks in anticipation of an even higher market. First grade Deschutes Russets have been moving at $2.90 and $3.00 wholesale. Klamath county firsts have been at approximately the same levels.

Cold weather has slowed egg deliveries with the Portland market still strong and practically no supplies in storage. Reports show Oregon shipped 28 carloads of eggs in December mostly to New York City and that shipments for the first 11 months of 1936 were 303 cars compared with 250 cars in the same period one year earlier.

Woodburn will have a light loganberry crop this coming year, predicts Harold K. Sargent who has just made a survey of the condition of the vines. The Woodburn loganberry pool is usually the largest in the state.

AGAIN IT SNOWED.
Heppner folk eyed the southern horizon all day Monday wondering whether its darkened hue would bring the chinook. The mercury hovered just above the freezing point, and wind during the day softened the snow. In the evening the wind reached proportions of a gale. Many went to sleep believing the chinook had surely come. But in the night came calm, and on the morn, behold! Another four inches of the beautiful, wet, fluffy snow. It all fell between 1 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Willa Carsner of Spray Passes at Fossil

Mrs. Willa Carsner, widow of the late Senator R. J. Carsner, was called by death Saturday (Jan. 26) at Fossil. Funeral rites were held in Spray Monday.

Mrs. Carsner's health had been failing for a number of years. Friday she was stricken with a heart attack while at her ranch home near Spray. She was taken to Fossil by ambulance that day.

Mrs. Carsner was the daughter of James A. and Sarah Magone Hughes. She was married to Robert J. Carsner in 1908. Mr. Carsner, who served the state as representative from the 28th district from 1920 to 1924 and was elected senator from the 18th district in 1924 and again in 1928, preceded his wife in death in 1933. At the time of his death he was register of The Dalles U. S. Land office.

Interment was in the Haystack cemetery at Spray beside her husband and parents.

A son, James, of Spray survives. Another son, Joe, was killed in an auto accident in August, 1935, a few miles south of Condon.—Condon Globe Times.

Mrs. Carsner was a sister of the late Sam Hughes of this city.

Airmail on Increase, Postmaster Reports

The greatest air mail year in its history was recorded by Oregon in 1936 when its citizens sent 229,329 pounds of correspondence over the airways, it was reported today in official figures released by Postmaster Chas. B. Cox.

The record-breaking total represented a gain of 13,323 pounds, or more than six per cent, over Oregon's 1935 air mail volume. Of the total, 197,470 pounds were dispatched from Portland, 10,532 pounds from Pendleton and 21,327 pounds from Medford, as the three points in Oregon at which air mail planes stop.

Still further gains in the speed of air mail service, plus added schedules and a continued growth of the nation's vast airway network are expected to contribute to even larger air mail loads in 1937, Postmaster Cox said.
