Growers' Expression Needed.

LETHARGIC interest among producers toward important strike legislation at Salem threatens adequate protection of their interests, it is learned from competent sources. There should be an immediate expression from growers relative to their desires on this as well as other important legislation.

If growers want to avert further costly strikes such as the maritime strike which now seems to be nearing its end, now is the time to say so. The "Hood River" bills, so-called, are designed to accomplish this purpose. They may need some amending, but if immediate expression is not heard from those they are intended to benefit, namely the producers, they will be swamped under the pressure of labor leaders working through sympathetic legislators.

Another vital measure is the senate memorial asking congress to forbid imports of livestock from countries where foot and mouth disease is prevalent. Uncle Sam spent millions of dollars cleaning this disease up once. Now is the time for the producer to act if he doesn't want to take the brunt of having to clean it up again.

House bills 56 and 57 are the "Hood River" bills. They are now in the hands of the house committee on Labor and Industries, having been read the first time and referred to that committee January 22.

Now is the time for producers to get the wires hot to Salem to protect their interests.

May It Pass.

REPRESENTATIVE FRENCH of Morrow has introduced a bill at Salem which would redistrict the state, giving each county one representative regardless of population with the remainder of the 60 house members apportioned on a population basis.

French contends, and we are with him in it, that every county should be represented regardless of population. This theory is carried out in the national government by allowing each state two senators and one representative regardless of population.

As an instance, Morrow county at present has no resident representative at Salem. Still Morrow county compares in area with many of the larger counties. This domain should be regulated for the general welfare, as it supplies livelihood for many people residing elsewhere. Those most competent to legislate for any region are the people who know that region.

French's bill is a good one and should pass.

A memorial introduced in the senate this week asks ban on shipment of livestock from countries where "foot and mouse disease" prevails, says Monday's Oregonian. Nothing like keeping the pantry varmits healthy.

Here's a smart newspaper story, reprinted in a trade publication:

A young man whose first job was that of reporter on a newspaper was having a lot of trouble writing his stories. All his efforts seemed to find their way into the trash basket.

Finally one day the city editor called him and said: "Look—you don't quite know what the public is interested in, what news really is. For example, if a dog bites a man, that isn't news. But if a man bites a dog, that's news."

The young man thought about that and several days later the paper came out with the following headline:

FIRE PLUG BREAKS—WETS DOG.

Quincy Scott, Oregonian cartoonist, took time by the forelock in welcoming Groundhog day Tuesday with the cleverest cartoon seen in many a day. Inspired by Oregon's deep snow of the day before, it showed Pa Groundhog in difficulty digging down to his "shadder." Orchids to this master crayon-pusher.

Not so fortunate as other parts of the state, Heppner, with hillsides showing bare spots from Monday's chinook, feared lest Mr. Groundhog could find his "shadder" here more easily as Sol's rays shone brightly.

Wind Drifts Snow, Heckling Road Crews

High winds with moderating temperatures took the snow off the high spots on the hills around Heppner while complicating traffic conditions. Road crews have been busy battling drifts over the county all week with the wind making new drifts faster than old ones could be cleared away. The Lexington-Jarmon road alone had been cleared yesterday afternoon though some progress had been made elsewhere.

Two state rotary plows arrived this week to assist in the work, one of which cleared the Lex-Jarmon road. The other had cleared the road to Hardman from Rhea creek once, but was out of commission yesterday afternoon after the wind had again blocked the road. About half of the county's road equipment was reported stalled at various places. The state rotary which was operating in the lower country had been ordered into the Portland area to assist with work there, it was reported.

In Heppner a good sized crew was put to work Tuesday cleaning out curbing and drains to take care of the water as the snow melted gradually. Willow creek has shown but little rise from the easy thaw, indicating but little run-off from the hills. A few light snow squalls came at intervals in the week, one celebrating Groundhog day, Tuesday afternoon.

The deadline date for making income tax returns is March 15, and anyone needing help should make it a point to see Mr. Maloney's representative on the date set. His services are free.

Lions Committee Finds Passive Interest; Club Backs Legislative Flood Control Lobby.

A general willingness on the part of business houses to cooperate, should Heppner wish to try a test of the old-age revolving pension fund, was reported by the Lions investigating committee at the Monday luncheon. Passive interest only was manifested by a number of merchants who were satisfied to await results of the experiments being conducted at Chelan, Wash. J. V. Crawford made the report for the committee.

Report of the committee's findings were made known to Mrs. Alta Brown, pension worker, at whose instigation the service club made the investigation. On Mrs. Brown's call for registrants over sixty years, there was a lively response though no names were taken by F. W. Turner and H. O. Tenney awaiting more definite developments.

On accepting the committee's report, the Lions club voted to take no further part in sponsoring the plan, the matter being left entirely in the hands of the Townsend club.

Important legislation bearing on flood control was reported by S. E. Notson to be coming up at Salem. Because of the interest in securing flood control dams here, he believed an active interest in the matter should be taken by the people of this county. He was instructed by the club to carry to the county court its endorsement of the county's paying the expenses of a representative to Salem to work in the interests of this county when the legislation comes up for action.

Riley Munkers, president of FFA chapter in the local high school, told the club about this organization's work. Thirty-two boys are enrolled with evidence of increased membership. A wide variety of activities including stock judging, public speaking and athletics are engaged in for which individuals are scored on a point system in state and national competition. He hoped forging would be added to the Smith-Hughes work next year.

Tenants All Set in New Bank Quarters

New linoleum on the floors, the walls rekalsomined and the wood-work all revamped, the renovated office spaces in the First National bank building were all occupied by their tenants this week.

Attractive built-ins, modern lighting fixtures, ornamental mirrors were all used to advantage by E. L. Morton, manager of the local branch First National Bank of Portland in making the rear and upstairs of the building over into modern and attractive office spaces. Included in the work also was provision of living apartments for the care-taker, Mrs. Will Morgan, with all up-to-the-minute conveniences.

Besides providing work for a large number of workmen for the last two months, the improvement has given Heppner a modern office building of which to be proud.

The work is not yet completed, Mr. Morton said. Swinging doors to the upstairs entrances are yet to be installed, the basement will be deepened another foot and concrete floor put in, and the white brick walls will be cleaned with acid and coping painted. When all the work is finished the building will shine inside and out.

Not the least of Mr. Morton's prides is a new iron foreman recently installed to stoke the furnace which provides steam heat for the entire building.

Numbers will soon be placed on the office doors, and the register will read: Rear downstairs, Dr. R. M. Rice and Dr. R. C. Lawrence; upstairs, room 1, Victor Peterson, Federal Land Bank appraiser; rooms 2 and 3, S. E. Notson, attorney; 3 and 4, Frank C. Alfred, district attorney; 5, 6 and 7, J. L. Gault, receiver for First National Bank of Heppner and Farmers & Stockgrowers National Bank; 8, Forest Service; 9, Dr. L. D. Tibbles.

FEED GETTING SHORT.

Many stockmen have been busy rustling hay for their stock this week, with trucking complicated by blocked roads. Hay is showing a strong demand and fear is felt lest the feeding condition become serious should the adverse season continue much longer.

DANIEL LEATHERS BURIED.

Funeral services were held from the church in Monument for Daniel Leathers last Wednesday at 1:00, says Monument item in John Day Valley Ranger last week. His son, Lee Leathers of Long Creek, was the only one of his immediate family to attend the funeral.
