

Oregon Stockmen Make Applications

Oregon livestock men are now making applications for participation in the 1937 AAA range program, according to N. C. Donaldson, executive secretary of the state committee. The application blanks are obtained from the county agent, filled out, including a description and map of the ranch, and filed with the county agricultural conservation committee. A range examination under the direction of the forest service will then be made and a report sent to the rancher, along with approval of practices to be performed for the year.

Attention is called by those in charge of the program to the importance of clearing with the county committee before any rancher goes ahead with actual practices. Because of the need for haste last year, practices were sometimes approved which had been performed before actual clearance with the committee. This year, however, it is necessary that all range operators have the written approval of their county committee before going ahead with actual practices.

Where range examination was made last year and practices approved but not actually carried out, quick approval may be obtained for resuming operations under this year's program, it is pointed out. Where the operator is making application in 1937 for the first time, however, a range examination will be required before the county committee can approve range practices.

While the forms to be filled out do not bind the stockman in any way, the filling out of such a form is the first step in taking part in the program. The examination which follows is to determine the total range building allowance on each ranch. Stockmen may then earn payments, up to the limit of the range building allowance, for such practices as contouring range land, developing springs and seeps, range fencing, and deferred grazing, which consists in keeping stock off part of the range for part of the season, constructing earthen pits and reservoirs, digging or drilling wells, and water spreading.

Bad Weather Hits Local Trap Standing

High winds and cold weather prevailed at the local traps Sunday to account for the low team score of 64 with which Heppner lost to all three opponents for the day in the Oregonian telegraphic trapshooting tournament. Competing teams were Klamath 73, Eugene 74, and Mt. Angel 69. Opponents next Sunday will be Salem, Roseburg and The Dalles. Heppner now stands at 500 in the percentage column.

Sunday's scores were: Phil Mahoney 23, Ben Patterson 22, Judge Carmichael 21, John Lane 20, A. D. McMurdo 19, Earl Warner 19, Luke Bibby 19, Gene Ferguson 16, Ray Massey 16, R. M. Rice 16, Ed Kelly 16.

We Want to Swim, Say 160 Youngsters Signing Petition

One hundred and sixty-one boys and girls in Heppner want to go swimming. That is evidenced by almost unanimous response to a petition circulated in the high school and seventh and eighth grades under the sponsorship of Scott McMurdo.

Asking that the city provide a swimming pool, these youngsters have signed a pledge that they will do all they can to help the move, and will patronize the pool when completed:

"We, the undersigned, students of the Heppner Public Schools, respectfully ask the co-operation of the citizens of Heppner, Oregon, in our efforts to obtain a swimming pool for this community and do hereby promise to co-operate in every way possible to make this project a success.

Many Delegates Due At C. E. Convention

Corvallis.—More than 1000 Oregon boys and girls from 10 to 16 years old are expected to attend the forty-seventh annual State Christian Endeavor convention for which Corvallis and Oregon State college will be hosts April 15 to 18. Many of the sessions will be held on the college campus.

Registrations are coming in fast, with the largest delegations so far from Tillamook, Grande Ronde and Lincoln county unions. Oregon has 500 Christian Endeavor societies, with a total of more than 10,000 members, and each society is a member of one of the 18 unions into which the state is divided.

The delegates will be housed in private homes in Corvallis, Albany and Philomath, according to Mrs. O. M. Locke, Corvallis, placement chairman, and arrangements are being made for the women's groups of three churches to serve meals to the visitors.

A contest for posters advertising the convention and its theme will be another feature, with a union prize offered for the best group of posters and for individuals.
